Deeds, Not Words, for Russia
Many Kings, Real Ones
Says Mr. Farley to Mr. Moses Revive a Dead Convict?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

Copyright, 1934, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

RUSSIA HAS troubles corresponding with our anxieties about Communists, whispering propaganda.

In Russia, the trouble is the other way round. Fascists in Russian factories are spreading Fascist propaganda among Communist workers, telling them that Communism is a failure.

Here we are content to moan, wring our hands, roll our eyes toward Heaven. In Russia they believe in deeds, not words only, and three engineers of the "Kuhnetzk" metallurgical works are ordered shot for praising Fascism, the Mussolini kind of dictatorship, as compared with Communism, the Stalin kind of dictatorship.

Serbians gathered along the line as King Alexander's body passed, bemoaned the passing "of the last real king in Europe." Other kings must take orders from Parliament. It was the last real king who was passing.

King Alexander did make his own laws and enforce them, but in so doing he roused the hatred of Croatians, one of whom killed him. He might better have imitated mild King George of England, and allowed his Parliament and ministers to carry the load of responsibility.

However, plenty of other "real kings" remain in Europe, Mussolini in Italy, Stalin in Russia, Hitler in Germany. They do not at the moment wear golden crowns, or cloaks of ermine, but later any one of them may wear one or both, and in the meantime, they are real "kings" as regards power, greater, more absolute than Alexander of Yugoslavia ever had.

Mr. Moses, able citizen, excellent park commissioner, now running for governor of New York on the Republican ticket, believes, with many friends, that he has blown the Honorable Postmaster General Mr. Farley miles into the air.

The blowing up is supposed to have been done by printing a letter in which Mr. Farley requested Mr. Moses to appoint Democrats as workers in public parks.

Mr. Farley, who is, and always has been, a Democrat, does not agree with Mr. Moses as to the probable effect of this "important revelation." The Postmaster General worries about Democrats, not about Republicans, and all things being equal or even not quite equal, Mr. Farley would rather see a Democrat than a Republican chosen to collect a salary.

This may shock Mr. Moses and the pure, but it will not shock the average Democrat, and he is the animal that interests Mr. Farley.

Dr. Cornish succeeded in resuscitating two dogs after they were "killed" and officially declared "dead," called the dogs "Lazarus 4" and "Lazarus 5." Lazarus 4, Dr. Cornish says, is a "half wit." His body came back to life but his brain did not. He hopes for better mental success with Lazarus 5.

Governor Johnson of Colorado, who believes that within reasonable limits convicts may properly be used in scientific experiments, may give Dr. Cornish permission to bring "a dead convict" back to life, after the convict has been executed.

If the resuscitation should work, what would you do with the convict? It would be too heartless to execute him again and too foolish to turn a convicted murderer loose on society. Perhaps it would be fair to arrange for life imprisonment under fairly pleasant conditions for a convict once killed officially and then in the interest of science brought back.

French detectives find their favorite motto, Cherchez La Femme, "Seek the Woman," important in the King Alexander assassination.

Police are eagerly seeking a person of the "weaker sex" described as "a young Slav woman of extraordinary beauty," "with unusually elegant luggage,"

Garrison Quits Board Saturday

Washington, Oct. 17 (INS)—Although his successor has not yet been named, Lloyd K. Garrison, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, announced he would leave Saturday to resume his duties as dean of the law school of the University of Wisconsin,

ELY REMOVES GOODWIN ON FIN. COM.

Frank A. Goodwin, independent candidate for governor, was today replaced as a member of the Boston Finance Commission by Alexander Wheeler, Boston attorney.

The replacement was tantamount to an ouster proceeding by Governor Ely and the executive council, which sat with Lieutenant-Governor Gaspar G. Bacon, Republican nominee for governor.

Goodwin's term on the commission expired a week ago. He had previously been demoted from the chairmanship by Ely as an outcome of his participation in a Brockton labor dispute.

This noon the governor sent Wheeler's name to the council and it was immediately confirmed under suspension of the rules.

200 FLEE BLAST IN SOUTH END

An explosion, which was followed by fire, damaged the Bristol Shoe Company plant at 41 Bristol street in the South End, close to fire department headquarters, today, rocked the district and drove 200 workers to the street from adjoining buildings.

The blast shattered 31 windows in the shoe plant on the fourth floor of the building and broken glass dropped into Bristol street, narrowly missing several pedestrians and damaging the parked automobile of Harry Fishstein of 30 Summit avenue, Brookline. Fishstein had just stepped from the car. He was not hurt.

GIRL HERE IN 'IRON LUNG' FOR YEAR

Just a little more than a year ago Celia Surovski sat in a Quincy office and sent her fingers across a typewriter at lightning speed.

Today the 24-year-old stenographer is in an "iron lung" in the south ward of Boston City Hospital, barely able to move the fingers of her right hand and the toes of her right foot.

She has been in that respirator, one of the two at City Hospital, for exactly one year and 11 days, and for the greater part of that time she was unable to move a single muscle below her neck.

INFANTILE VICTIM

It was on October 6, 1933, that the girl—the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Surovski of 3 Kensington street, Roxbury—was stricken by infantile paralysis along the entire length of her spinal column.

And it was on that day that one of the most courageous battles for life—and one of the most cheerful—ever waged in City Hospital—and the place has seen many—had its beginning.

Under the care of Dr. Edwin H. Place of West Newton the girl was not once removed from the respirator during her first six months in the hospital. Now it is possible for her to be out of the machine for as much as three hours a day.

It's a hard life, flat on your back in a big, coffin-shaped machine, with just your head and its bobbed brunette hair projecting—especially if the doctors tell you that you are facing an uphill fight to live with the odds all stacked against you.

SURE SHE'LL RECOVER

But Celia Surovski has a fine contempt for odds, and now she is sure that she will beat them. Confidently, she says:

"I do a lot of thinking. I've got time for it in this thing. And most of my thoughts are about

DILLINGER AIDE DIES SILENT

Columbus, O., Oct. 17—Harry Pierpont, fair-haired "brains" of the dissolved Dillinger mob, was electrocuted in Ohio Penitentiary early today—the first of the nomadic gang of robbers and killers to receive by legal process the full wages of crime.

Quietly, unaided and with the ghost of a smile on his lips, the 32-year-old killer sat down to death in the gaunt wooden chair within the high stockade of a prison guarded in unprecedented fashion, so fearful was Warden Preston E. Thomas of the zero hour possibility the law would be frustrated.

With him into death, Pierpont carried the "inside story" of his break in September, 1933, from the Michigan City, Ind., state prison.

Hauptmann's Appeal May Halt N. J. Action

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 17—Bruno Richard Hauptmann lost his first legal battle and today he is faced with the prospect of an early extradition to New Jersey to stand trial for the murder of little Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Only one legal obstacle stands in the way of his removal to New Jersey. That is the appeal his counsel, James M. Fawcett, plans to file with the appellate division before 4 o'clock next Friday from the decision last night of Justice Ernest L. Hammer of the Bronx Supreme Court, who dismissed Hauptmann's writ of habeas corpus.

Justice Hammer decided, after

WIFE FACES CHARGE IN LINDBERGH LAW

A new outbreak of kidnap threats came today on the heels of the safe return of Mrs. Alice Stoll, 26-year-old Kentucky society woman, who had been held by an alleged crazed abductor for six days. Latest developments are:

Federal agents revealed a $5000 death letter threat which was sent to Edsel Ford. The alleged writer of the letter has been arrested.

Boston police, together with officials of all New England, are searching for Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., reported kidnaper of Mrs. Stoll, following reports that the kidnap car was heading for this section.

Two wealthy Davenport, Ia., men received threatening letters demanding money, it was revealed by federal agents.

Louis Esposito, 23, son of a wealthy Bronx family, is in the hands of a kidnap gang, believed to have been led by a mysterious woman.

ARREST DUE IN KIDNAP

By Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 17—As the Federal Government bent all its efforts today to find Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., named as the mad kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, Harold Nathan, Department of Justice investigator, announced that charges of conspiracy to violate the Lindbergh law probably would be pressed against Mrs. Robinson.

By Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 17—Hampered no longer by any danger to Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, Federal agents today concentrated their efforts on running down Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., named as the mad kidnaper who took the society woman from her home here last Wednesday for $50,000 ransom.

In Louisville, decision as to whether Robinson would face life imprisonment or death hinged on a consultation to be held between U. S. District Attorney Thomas J. Sparks, and Commonwealth's Attorney Emmet O'Neal. Kentucky provides death in the electric chair as the maximum punishment for kidnaping. The federal government, under the Lindbergh law, can go no further than life imprisonment.

Mrs. Stoll, daughter of one of Kentucky's wealthiest families, was given complete isolation today in order that she might rest. She lay in her own bed in their home on Lime Kiln Lane. Joyous relatives stayed away from the 16-acre estate but received reports that she was recovering from the shock of her experience. She was slugged when kidnaped while ill with a cold and Harold Nathan, department of justice investigator said, she had been brutally treated at times during her captivity. He added that save for a few instances of rough usage, the kidnaper's "behavior was that of a gentleman."

"Mrs. Stoll was held in an apartment. We raided it last night. She slept in a clean bed each night.

"She was beaten and struck. Each time Robinson left the

FORD PLOT IS BARED

By Associated Press

Toronto, Oct. 17—Celestine Daly, 20-year-old daughter of John Daly, millionaire tea merchant of Napanee, Ont., was rushed out of town today by members of her family following threats she would be kidnaped or harmed.

By Associated Press

Detroit, Oct. 17—A threat to kill Edsel Ford unless he paid $5000 was revealed by Department of Justice agents here this morning with the arrest and purported confession of a man who gave the name of Edward Lickwala.

Federal agents said Lickwala, 20, wrote a note to Ford demanding that he leave the $5000, in $5 and $10 bills, in a candy box at the rear of 3341 Medbury avenue.

The agents said a dummy package was prepared and left at the designated place. They said Mrs. Claude Landerville, who lives at the address given, picked up the package and that later Lickwala was arrested.

The investigation which resulted in Lickwala's arrest was directed by William Larson, head of the Department of Justice here.

The letter was dated October 8. A trap was laid on December 12, but it was only partially successful.

Lickwala finally was arrested last night, agents said, but it was kept secret until morning.

Agents said they questioned all members of the Landerville family and, while they were absolved of complicity in the attempted extortion, information was obtained which directed suspicion to Lickwala.

Edsel Ford is the only son of Henry Ford. He is 41 years old and has been president of the gigan-

HAUPTMANN'S WIFE NERVES SELF FOR NEW JERSEY FIGHT

Hauptmann and Handwriting Experts Clash; Alibi Fails as Court Refuses to Halt Extradition

GRAY, DRAWN, SHE HEARS WRIT DENIED

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

New York, Oct. 17—"Wherever he goes, I'll be with him."

A twisted smile on her blanched lips, Anni Hauptmann squared her shoulders bravely in the midst of a hysterical, crowded courtroom tonight, after Supreme Court Justice Ernest Hammer ruled that her husband must stand trial in New Jersey for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

During the long wait before court convened for the evening session, an hour and ten minutes late, the staunch German wife, who has stood so loyally by the man accused of the crime of the century, grew visibly nervous.

When the solemn words of the judge echoed through the momentarily hushed courtroom, she clenched one hand against her lips. But there were no tears, no outcry.

She was asked:

"If your husband is transferred to a New Jersey prison, will you move to a place near him?"

Then she spoke, fiercely.

"Of course, I will go wherever he goes. But maybe they won't take him there. There is this appeal, yes?

"There might still be a chance. But—if he must go, then I go too.

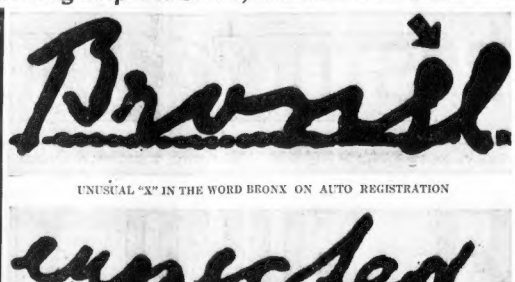

"Where will I stay? Why, wherever I can be nearest him. He needs me now, my Richard."

The weary-faced woman was then rushed out of the courtroom by her attorneys, while flashlights flared. She was taken immediately to the home of her nephew, Hans Mueller, where she has been making her home since her husband's arrest.

There she will wait until the next move is decided in the fight for Hauptmann's freedom.

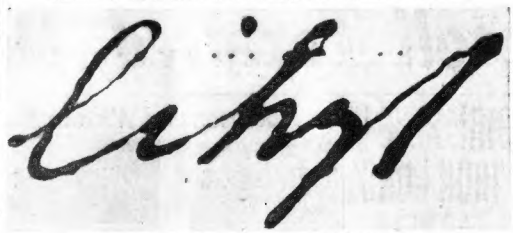

Innocent until proved guilty, the law says of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, charged with murder in New Jersey and extortion in New York. Yet the law's grip is close on the Lindbergh kidnap-slaying suspect and bailiffs sit at his elbow, watching his every move, as he testifies in New York court that he did not write the ransom notes which he holds in his hand. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

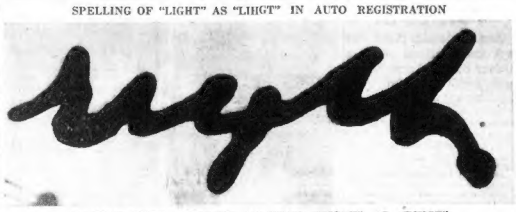

UNUSUAL "X" IN THE WORD BRONX ON AUTO REGISTRATION

SIMILAR "X" AS IT APPEARS IN RANSOM NOTE WORD "EXPECTED"

SPELLING OF "LIGHT" AS "LIHGT" IN AUTO REGISTRATION

RANSOM NOTE SPELLING OF WORD "RIGHT" AS "RIHGT"

Handwriting experts claim these similarities between Lindbergh ransom notes and Bruno Richard Hauptmann's application for an automobile license will prove Hauptmann guilty of the "blood money" extortion. The two "X's," shown enlarged above, both seem to have the same characteristic "U" shape. The mis-spelling of "light" and "right," it is claimed, both betray a writer unfamiliar with the English silent "H." (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

"Where he goes, I go. What befalls him, I share." So asserts Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, wife of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Lindbergh kidnap-murder suspect. This closeup of her was made as she sat in court in New York ready to testify in behalf of the husband to whom she is unflinchingly loyal.

"He couldn't have kidnaped the Lindbergh baby. He is a father himself. And he was with me on the night of the crime." That's the testimony of Mrs. Bruno Richard Hauptmann, a court witness in support of her husband's alibi. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

Labor trouble on the site of construction of two oil farms along the new tunnel highway in Revere flared into violence today when one faction threw rocks, bottles and bolts at the other and police fired shots to put down an incipient riot.

More than 150 non-union workers erecting tanks at the Hartol Oil Company were endangered but not injured by a barrage of missiles tossed over the fire-wall between their location and that of the Tidewater Oil Company, where 200 union men are engaged in construction work.

Patrolman Amos McCauley, one of four policemen on guard since a disturbance three weeks ago, fired several shots in the air. Fifteen more officers were sent.

HAUPTMANN APPEAL HALTS NEW JERSEY ACTION

considering all the evidence submitted at a two-day hearing, that Hauptmann had failed to prove he was not in New Jersey at the time of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

Attorney Fawcett asked Justice Hammer for a stay until next Monday but Attorney-General David T. Wilentz objected to that length of time. The judge thought such a stay would be "unreasonable" and granted Fawcett until next Friday afternoon to file his appeal with the appellate division.

SPEED PROMISED

Hauptmann, meanwhile, was remanded to the custody of Sheriff John Hanley of the Bronx and today the prisoner is confined in his cell in the Bronx County jail.

Presiding Justice Edward R. Finch of the Appellate Division has indicated there will be a speedy disposition of Hauptmann's appeal. Justice Finch said that if Fawcett's appeal shows merit the stay he asks can be granted. But, also, it can be denied.

In the latter event the officers from New Jersey would be free to transfer the prisoner to their state. He pointed out that the calendar of the Appellate Division is up to date and cases, such as Hauptmann's which have a special aspect, can be heard without delay.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, of New Jersey, who successfully fought Hauptmann's writ of habeas corpus, said that either he or a representative of the Bronx county district attorney's office will oppose the appeal in the Appellate division.

WILENTZ IN CHARGE

The trial of Hauptmann for murder in New Jersey will take place in Flemington, Hunterdon county, three or four weeks after Hauptmann is brought to that place, according to Wilentz.

The prosecution of the former German machine-gunner will be in Wilentz's hands, the latter stated. He added:

"We will not rush the Hauptmann defense. They will have ample time to prepare for trial."

Wilentz was asked if he had exposed New Jersey's entire case in opposing the Hauptmann habeas corpus proceedings. The attorney general replied that he called to the stand only half a dozen of the 24 witnesses he had on hand.

When all the New York legal obstacles are out of the way and the prisoner is handed over to the New Jersey authorities, Hauptmann will be placed in the hands of Captain J. J. Lamb of the New Jersey state police, who has 25 men in New York ready to transfer the Lindbergh suspect to the jail at Flemington.

Wilentz expressed the opinion that the Hauptmann evidence presented "nothing new" during the habeas corpus proceedings.

NOTES DENIED

Hauptmann, on the stand, had denied he had written any of the Lindbergh ransom notes. He denied, too, that he had been in New Jersey at any time during January, February or March, 1932.

In saying this he refuted the testimony of the prosecution's star witness at the habeas corpus proceedings, Millard Whited, a logger, of Lambertville, N. J., who said that on two occasions, late in February, 1932, he had seen Hauptmann in the vicinity of the Lindbergh estate.

Preparations went forward in New Jersey, meanwhile, for the trial of Hauptmann for the Lindbergh baby's murder. On Thursday a committee representing the press will go over the lay-out of the Hunterdon County court at Flemington with a view of providing ample facilities for the newspapers in handling the trial.

The appearance of Hauptmann on the witness stand was the highlight of the habeas corpus proceedings in New York. His alibi was that on the night of the kidnaping of the baby, March 1, 1932, he was at home in the Bronx, New York City.

He said he did not remember exactly what he did that day—whether he went to a Sixth avenue employment agency looking for work or whether he actually had worked at the Majestic Apartment Hotel, then in the course of construction.

Hauptmann said he did remember that he returned home that evening, changed his clothes, went to the garage, obtained his car and drove to the bakery in the Bronx, where his wife Annie, was employed.

He testified he ate supper there with her and, about 9 o'clock, drove her home. He said they remained at their home all night.

LIKE MAN STUNNED

When he realized that his fight to prevent extradition had collapsed into failure, Hauptmann took his defeat like a man stunned.

While he showed no change in his features, his whole body seemed to have shriveled. He sank in his chair. And when the court remanded him again to the custody of Sheriff John Hanley, it was necessary to prod him to get him to arise.

Hauptmann's face was a study. The deep-sunk eyes, burned by sleepless hours and worry, looked out as from a corpse.

His lips were so pale it was hard to distinguish them. His face was blue, emphasized by a beard which had been permitted to grow during the last 24 hours. His hands clenched the edges of his chair, but he could not keep himself from slumping. It was obvious that the decision was an unexpected blow.

LAWYER EXPECTED IT

His attorney, however, had expected it.

Mrs. Hauptmann, apparently unable to understand, looked at the spectators who sat near her.

When she saw their expressions, she knew.

Her husband had lost his first major fight. He must stand trial for murder.

The court had not believed him, the court had not believed her. She had testified they were home together in the Bronx the night of the kidnaping. The burden of proof had been on Hauptmann.

In his opinion handed out in typewritten form later, Justice Hammer said that he had been "liberal" in considering the evidence, in favor of the demanding state.

WRITING WAS CLUE

The most important evidence, in affecting his decision, it appeared, was the testimony of the handwriting expert, Albert S. Osborn.

The ransom notes, he added, in his opinion, for the purposes of the hearing, constituted, in admission by Hauptmann that he had been present in New Jersey at the time of the crime.

He continued:

"The testimony of the witness Whited may be weakened by the attack made on his credibility, but, considered by the same rule, it adds to the weight of the admissions showing presence.

"I do not regard this statement as setting forth a rule of evidence for the guidance of a trial court which later may consider the same evidence.

"My conclusion is that relator has not conclusively established that he was not in the demanding state at the time it is charged the crime was committed."

HARRIMAN HAS NEW NRA PLAN

By Associated Press

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 17—A proposed act, embodying a definite formulation of a permanent economic policy and differing sharply from the National Recovery measure, was outlined today by Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

In a speech before the annual convention of the Grain and Feed Dealers' National Association, Mr. Harriman declared the codification of industry is now virtually completed and "the exigencies which called this measure into existence have largely passed."

MADMEN IN MINES STORY OF HORROR 1000 WAIT DEATH

BLAST READY

MIDNIGHT WAS ZERO HOUR

(Hours of horror in the darkness of a coal mine, where 1000 Hungarian miners waited death in their amazing hunger strike against starvation wages, were described for Universal Service by one of the strike leaders.

Only a partial victory was won by the strikers when they capitulated to the prayers of wives and children, for the Austrian owners refused to raise their pay from $2 to $3.50 a week, though promising them a bonus of $19 a man now and more at Christmas. For 114 hours the men, resigned to death and gradually going mad, refused to leave the mine.)

By GASPAR VAZRO

(Copyright 1934, by Universal Service.)

Pecs, Hungary, Oct. 17—Well, it's over, and if we didn't get everything we wanted, we got something.

I spent 114 hours down there, 1200 feet to the ground, and it wasn't fun. But we were desperate.

I am 41, have a wife and child, and expect another baby soon. I earn four and a half pengoes—a dollar and a half—weekly. We haven't been able to get credit for ages.

Thursday afternoon I went down in the shaft. Miners in other shifts were in an ugly mood and would not go up. We finally decided to strike, for it would be better to die than to go on half-starved.

We sterilized many, if not all, might die, and we found some boards to make some coffins. We told the men to lie down so as to hold out as long as possible.

Pretty Awful

After the first 30 hours, the strong ones were often nervous to lie down and kept pacing up and down. The last two days was pretty awful down there. You could hardly breathe.

Several of the men went crazy and begun running up and down and shouting like lunatics.

Some of the crazy men wanted to blow up the mine with dynamite we had stored in the shaft. So we formed a committee of 15 leaders with powers of life and death over the whole thousand strikers. And I was one of the committee.

The first thing we did was to tie up the crazy men. The spirit of the others was fine. Saturday, the brother of one miner came down and said their father was dead. But both of them refused to go up for the funeral.

Talked About Kids

We didn't do much talking. Some talked about their kids, whom they never expected to see again. We have an average of three kids apiece.

The air kept getting fouler, but we held on and spirits were good until Sunday. Then 25 men got pretty sick.

Monday, more and more men passed out, unconscious. We decided that all was up—the company preferred us dead to living.

So we decided to make death come quickly. By midnight if the company did not make a decent offer, we decided to blow up the mine and ourselves.

It was getting about time and the men were facing death bravely. Then the Socialist deputy came down just before midnight with the new proposition from the company.

It was not much but it will keep us from starving.

BIG JOKE ON HARVARD BOYS "YACHT VICTIMS"

What is commonly known as the "run around" was given to three undergraduates at Harvard last night.

And at the same time, the hopes of America to defend the yachting cup against the next invasion of T. O. M. Sopwith, British yachtsman, received a heavy blow.

Someone posted a notice in the hall of Eliot House telling of a meeting to devise plans to defeat the Briton in his next venture. All were invited.

George L. Oettler, Thomas Paull and William H. Keffer, occupants of the room wherein the meeting was to be held, ignorant of the proceedings, were busy all night long turning away gullible students who came to attend.

BEHAVING "Films Better"

So marked has been the improvement in the moral tone of moving pictures recently that no drastic action is needed to keep them clean, in the opinion of the Reverend Russell Sullivan, who spoke at the final session of "A Better Film Institute" at 3 Joy street. He attributed the improvement to the united front presented by civic organizations that have concentrated on the movement.

Ears Out of Ambush, Platinum Blondes Passe

KATHERINE HEPBURN

TOBY WING
Platinum—Passe

They put the bee on long bobs and straight hair generally. They called ears out of ambush and pronounced curls de rigeur. In a codicil, they said college colors should be worn on thumb nails and painted jewels on finger nails.

All of which might be tragic to many girls, were the situation not relieved by the fact that almost all the men who dictated what women should do with their hair were themselves bald! But nobody said anything about that, probably because of the prevalent superstition that only the interior decoration of the male skull counts.

Certainly the guests of honor, M. Rene Flambond of Paris and M. Gustave Boudou of London, who are Chevaliers of the Legion of Honor, too, could never qualify for Paderewski or Harpo Marx! But in brief speeches they declared America should emulate France in viewing hair-dressing as an art, while France should adopt American business methods. Ambiguous applause greeted the last part of the statement.

About the nail business—although why hair dressers should cut into the manicurers domain was not clear—but anyway, college colors should be enameled on thumbs. Whether the fad was launched to pep up the football season or to facilitate hitch-hikers' progress across country was not made clear.

The colors may be in bars, stripes, a shield or any form. You own college or your sweetheart's or even an adopted alma mater will do. The finger nails may remain tinted pink.

Boomerang! He Quizzes Wife in Court

CHURBUCK ASKS ABOUT 'BLOW'; HE'S TOLD

Brockton, Oct. 17—When he cross-examined his own wife in the trial to determine who shall have the custody of their 4-year-old son

MRS. ALICE CHURBUCK

Percival F. Churbuck, of Middleboro, did not fare so very well.

He reminded her that she had testified that he had struck her, and asked her to what she would ascribe the reason for the blow. She promptly replied:

"To satisfy your brute instincts, I suppose."

Churbuck whirled to the judge in protest, and asked that the reply be stricken for the record.

Replied Judge Lloyd E Chamberlain:

"You asked for it."

Churbuck explained the entries in his diary describing an alleged visit to New York with two girls as purely fictional concocted to fool his friends during an absence of his wife.

The case will conclude today.

RAY CURE INDIAN CUSTOM HERBS ARE USED

By Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 17—Successful cure of X-ray burns by application of an herb used by the Seminole Indians in Florida has been reported here.

Dr. C. E. Collins and his son, Creston, of Crisfield, Md., described the efficiency of the herb in treating burns either from X-rays or fire, in a paper read before the radiological section of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty here.

Members of the faculty said the curative powers of the plant should be submitted to an "intensive investigation," as the only effective cure for X-ray burns at present is by skin grafting.

The younger Collins said he discovered the healing qualities of the plant while living on the edge of the Everglades last year.

He said the Seminole Indians in that area had long used applications of the leaf of the aloe vera, a large, green, cactus-like plant, to cure fire burns.

Instances of recovery so complete that scars were scarcely distinguishable were cited.

DEATH TRY FOLLOWS ROW

By International News Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 17—As gay crowds danced to a haunting melody at the exclusive Cocounut Grove, here, Thomas P. Phelan, 27, of Tucson, sent a bullet into his body, just below the heart, in an effort to end his life, police reported today.

Pelan, said to be the son of N. W. Phelan, Canadian railroad magnate and prominent race horse breeder, was being questioned by police over his champagne bill, amounting to $13, officers said.

Phelan assertedly drew a revolver from his pocket and slumped to the floor as the small automatic was discharged into his body.

JUGGLER Gets Out G. O. P.

By International News Service

Concord, N. H., Oct. 17 — The State Republican committee has decided there must be more than a figurative relationship between the art of juggling and the great political issues.

They are considering putting on vaudeville acts at political rallies in order to attract crowds to hear major and local candidates.

The plan will be tried out at Rochester on Friday night, according to Paul Blaisdell, head of the Republican young guard. In connection with a rally there, a ball will be held, and vaudeville acts will be shown.

NURSES GET TIME ON 8-HOUR DAY FOR NORMAL LIFE

DIVIDENDS IN HAPPINESS

Delegates to the congress of the American College of Surgeons can take back to their respective communities a message that the eight-hour day for nurses is a successful experiment.

The Massachusetts General Hospital has had this system on trial for the past six months, Miss Sally Johnson, supervisor of nurses at the Boston Institution, told the congress.

By it, she explained, the patient pays a little more, the hospital incurs a little more expense, but the nurse herself carries most of the financial burden.

In a census of doctors, nurses and patients on this eight-hour system, Miss Johnson said, doctors were for it 81 per cent; patients in favor 84 per cent; nurses voted 100 per cent.

The cost increase to the patient is about seven per cent and to the hospital 19 per cent. To the nurse it means getting $4.50 and two meals a day as against $6 and three meals.

But, the supervisor pointed out, the system has brought higher efficiency, enabled three nurses to be employed where only two got work before, and gave the nurse a chance at normal life and happiness that she couldn't hope to have on the 12-hour shift.

If it is generally adopted, Miss Johnson declared, it will mean raising the standards, getting more nurses of "higher character and higher intelligence."

TITLIST IN BATTLE NOW TO HOLD LOVE OF DOCTOR

It was as a championship javelin thrower that Miss Alyss Ryden, above, achieved celebrity in the Olympic games in Los Angeles. Now she's in the news again, this time as alleged "constant associate" of Dr. Kenneth W. Taber, wealthy physician, whose former wife, socially prominent Mrs. Estern-Merle Black, is fighting in court for custody of two children. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

ON HARVARD CAMPUS

Apted Probes Presence of Midget Car

Major Charles R. Apted, chief of the yard police at Harvard, has another mystery on his hands.

It seems that sometime last night or early today some members of the undergraduate body boldly set one of those "midget" automobiles smack in the court yard of the Dunster House in Memorial drive, forbidden territory to motorists.

The dignified atmosphere of the yard of the house was rudely upset by Bronx cheers and wise cracks as yard policemen hurried to remove the car.

Major Apted immediately opened a probe.

WIDOW SET TO STUMP

Mrs. Chase Finishes Her Cooking

Washington, N. H., Oct. 17—Mrs. Etha K. Chase, widowed mother of five children, is just about ready to transfer her efforts from the cook stove to the stump.

Mrs. Chase is candidate for governor on the state Communist ticket but she has been far too busy with her fall preserving so far to do other than listen to the radio campaign speeches of her opponents while "putting up" chow-chow and jellies and mince-meat "and the like o' that," She said:

"The stomachs of the children are of more importance than the election, but I'm about finished now, the preserve closet is full and in a few days I can start my campaign."

FORGIVES Asks Pardon

Attorney G. Joseph Tauro, of Lynn, today wrote to the state board of parole, asking that a pardon be granted August Voce, 50, of Summer street, Lynn, who is now serving a life sentence for the 1930 shot Tauro twice.

"I feel that the crime has been expiated and know that Voce will now be a useful citizen," Tauro wrote the board.

Voce is in the Norfolk prison colony serving 10 to 12 years for assault with intent to kill.

Voce and Tauro were conferring on a settlement in an insurance case when an argument arose, precipitating the shooting.

LOOK OUT! Pedestrians Die

Of the 30,000 annual automobile accident deaths in this country last year nearly half of the victims—13,440—were pedestrians, it was announced by Hubert E. Canning, chief traffic engineer of the Department of Safety. Of this number 1680 were children, he said.

Injuries that did not result in death were 850,700, of which victims more than a quarter of a million were pedestrians, he continued, the majority of instances occurring during the crossing of intersections. Of the injured 47,780 were children.

CHILD'S PRINTS CLUE IN CITY PAY HOLDUP

While two traps were being set today for the bandits who looted the Brockton city hall of more than $12,000 yesterday, a State Police fingerprint expert revealed that the holdup was not the work of thugs, but a careful "job" of a clever gang, wise enough to wear gloves lest they leave a clue.

One of the traps was set at the Dorchester hideaway of a blonde who has been branded as the "brains" of the gang. The other was in Somerville, where the associates of Michael D. Geagan, supposed leader of the robbers, are believed to have a rendezvous.

Sergeant J. Warren Toelkis, state police fingerprint expert, arrived in Brockton and made a careful examination of the bandit car. He said:

"It is clear the bandits used gloves. This is the work of a clever gang. Of all the prints on this car only two are clear. They are those of a child on the rear window."

NO MARKS ON GUN

He also examined the riot gun which the bandits took at the City Hall and left in the car. It, too, indicated the men who handler it had worn gloves.

Still another clue found in the car was a Rockingham Park pari-mutuel ticket issued on the seventh race on July 7. Efforts will be made to identify the purchaser.

Registration plates on the car were stolen from an automobile owned by Charles E. Whaland of Commonwealth avenue.

Another development in the case came today when City Marshal James F. Morey and two patrolmen went to Boston police headquarters to get a suspect.

Morey said that he would ask employes of the Diamond Shoe Company—victim of a $26,000 payroll holdup—to view the man, as he believes he helped get the shoe factory's payroll last March.

GIRL IN DEATH FIGHT IN 'LUNG'

the day when I'll be out of this machine. Oh, I know I'll get out! I have no doubts about that."

And from the tone of her voice you know that she is saying just what she means. This is no whistling inthe dark to keeup up courage. This is confidence—the stuff that wins battles.

And it's a contagious confidence and cheerfulness that pervades the girl's room. It has spread to her family and the nurses and the doctors and the whole hospital—especially the children in the institution.

Celia's sister and her two brothers and her parents visit her. The hospital staff does everything in its power to make her comfortable. An interne has devised a special bookrack for her so that she may read. It is clamped onto the respirator and holds a book or a paper upside down over her eyes. And the nurses are only too glad to turn the pages.

LAUGHS WITH CHILDREN

But more than anything, the girl enjoys the visits that the child patients are permitted to make to her room. When they come there is laughter and singing in the place. And on the first of September there was a birthday cake and a party for all of them.

The radio attains a new value in your eyes when you realize what a big help it has been to this brave girl. No matter how fine her spirit, there must be dark and drab hours—bleak moods—for her who has been flat on her back—motionless—for more than a year. But how quickly they vanish at the turn of the dial!

Even more than books and newspapers, the radio helps to keep Celia mentally alert and interested in the outside world. It is, after all, so much easier just to listen than to read when someone else must turn each page for you!

But Celia has become quite accustomed to the respirator. It seems like a very good friend at times as she listens to the soft, sucking sound of the air being pulled in, the little blowing noise as it is exhaled again. She knows that it would have meant death if the machine had ever failed her in the early days.

Killed by Door of Truck

All Right for Man to Jilt Maid, Say Hub Girls

Question: Should a man be permitted to jilt a girl without facing suit for breach of promise? Here are answers given by Bostonians.

RITA FEENEY, 18, of 229 Corey road, Allston, Boston University student:

"A man has a perfect right to jilt a girl. This is a free country. If it happened to me, I would let him go and I wouldn't bring any suit against the man."

JOSEPH RUSSO, 22, of 21 Lee street, Cambridge, assistant foreman:

"I think that a man has a right to break up with a girl he has been keeping company with, and she shouldn't take him to court for breach of promise. If a girl brought such action against me, I certainly would reason with her."

JOHN EMERSON, 25, of Gates street, South Boston, foreman:

"A man has his own mind and should be allowed to do as he wishes. I think he has a perfect right to jilt a girl. Breach of promise suits show only that these women do not love their men and are only after the money. A woman who sues puts his money first in her heart, instead of love."

SALLY MASSARO, 18, of 58 Myrtle street, Beacon Hill, hairdreser:

"If I really loved him, I couldn't take a man to court to answer breach of promise charges, if I thought he had loved me too. There are many reasons why a man should jilt a girl and in some of them he would be justified. It might be his family, and in that case, I would fight for him."

JOAN McPARLAND, 19, of 13 Pomeroy street, Allston, Boston University student:

"Of course a man has a right to jilt a girl. She should consider herself lucky that she found out in time that they were not pulling together. If a man were engaged to me and then told me he wanted to call it off, I would let him go, give him back his ring and try and forget him."

Roxbury Salesman Injured in Fight

Arthur Whalen, 34, a salesman, living on Redlands road, West Roxbury, is in a serious condition at City Hospital, suffering from a laceration of the forehead and abrasions and contusions of the face, after being attacked near a West Roxbury lunch cart early today.

Girl 'Hobo' Believed to Be Missing Dayton Belle

Panope ("Bill") Kendall, 24, reticent girl hobo arrested a week ago while masquerading as a man, may be Pauline Kendall, missing daughter of a prominent Dayton, O., family, police said today.

Pauline Kendall vanished in Dayton three weeks ago. Boston authorities telegraphed Dayton today. They would not say whether clues or a "hunch" prompted the move.

This development was reported while the girl, still arrayed in man's clothing, was taken before Judge Thomas Dowd in municipal court, a second time on the vagrancy charge on which she is being held while officials attempt to pierce the mystery of her case.

Whereas a week ago the girl wept and told the court it was useless to attempt to learn her story, she stood calmly in the dock today and had nothing to say. Authorities know no more about her than they did last Wednesday, a short time after she had applied for a night's lodging at the city prison.

Today she wore the same gray suit and man's shirt she had on when taken into custody. She is an attractive girl, with close-clipped hair of jet black and big dark eyes. Those who have talked with her report her a student of psychology, apparently well educated.

She occupied the dock for two hours while Judge Dowd disposed of other cases. When her case was called court was informed an examination by a physician has not yet been completed and that a message which may reveal the girl's identity is awaited from Dayton.

Judge Dowd decided on another continuance to await results. A week ago she told him:

"I think its rather silly for you to be taking up all this time with me, because when I get out I'll go right back to it."

She has claimed to be an orphan and to have participated in her sex masquerade for many years in many parts of the country, without detection until her arrest here.

Judge Dowd, pending word from Dayton, sent the girl to the Psychopathic hospital for observation on recommendation of Dr. Edouard Sandoz, who examined her.

RUSSELL TELLS OF COCKTAILS

Brockton, Oct. 17—The jury at the trial of William H. Coolidge of Manchester on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor took the case under consideration this afternoon.

As final witness, Coolidge, Harvard graduate and wealthy gentleman farmer, testified he was neither under the influence nor drunk at the time of his arrest.

Coolidge is a close friend of Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge, who had been with him before his arrest in Onset on July 9 and yesterday testified for the defense that he had taken two or three cocktails with Coolidge before the arrest.

Mayor Russell said he had known Coolidge for 23 years and had never seen him under the influence of liquor. Coolidge was arrested as he and the mayor were about to embark with friends on a boat trip to the Harvard-Yale crew races.

Mayor Russell testified that on the night before the arrest he was with Coolidge at the home of friends in Marion and that they had two or three cocktails. Early the next morning they went to Onset and aboard the boat more cocktails were served. Later Coolidge left the pier, got into his car and was arrested.

Blazing Guns!

JOHN DILLINGER

Dillinger's Secret Dies In Chair With Gang 'Brains'

sion, John Dillinger, himself an ex-convict from that institution, and Pierpont organized a machine-gun gang that etched a frightful chapter in the history of modern crime.

"I am the only man alive who knows the 'who's' and the 'how's' and . . . I'll take this little story with me on my last walk," Pierpont recently wrote Miss Jessie Levy, Indianapolis attorney, who defended him.

That's what Pierpont did.

He was not asked for any "last word," as happens now and then at electrocutions, and he volunteered none.

He just sat down with a rueful smile, closed his eyes, strained the muscles of his lanky, six-foot-two frame as the current struck, clenched one fist—that was all.

BIDS PARENTS GOODBYE

In a letter written a short time before his execution, Pierpont declared his innocence and asserted that "there are certain things sweeter than a few dollars or even life itself."

Prison officials said his attitude of unrelenting enmity to the law melted away before he died and he was permitted to bid goodbye to his parents, Lena and John Pierpont.

Mary Kinder, whom Pierpont contended to the very last was his wife, visited him Monday for a few moments.

Pierpont died one year and four days after he, Charles Makley, 50, and Russell Clark, 33—all of the crew that escaped at Michigan City—walked into the residence office of Sheriff Jess Sarber at Lima, O., and killed him to free Dillinger, held in the county jail there as the robber of a Bluffton (O.) bank.

WIFE'S PLEAS VAIN

Pierpont was the gunner. Makley clubbed the sheriff with a heavy caliber gun after he had slumped with Pierpon't bullet in his abdomen. Clark held Deputy Wilbur Sharpe and Mrs. Sarber at the point of a third gun while the wife pleaded:

"Don't kill dad!"

The three were captured with Dillinger in Tucson, Ariz., hideouts Jan. 25, this year. Pierpont and Makley were sentenced to death for the Sarber killing andClark was given a life sentence.

Makley was slain by Ohio penitentiary's riot squad of "head hunters" three weeks ago when he and Pierpont sought to imitate Dillinger's escape methods and bluff their way out of death row with guns whittled from prison soap.

LIQUOR, GIRLS FINALLY INVADE DARTMOUTH

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 17—Operating on the principle that where no rules exist, no rules will be broken, Dartmouth College has startled the college world by permitting girls and liquor in dormitories.

Under the authority of six men selected by the college administration from a list of undergraduates in each dormitory nominated by popular vote, girls will be permitted to visit the boys in their rooms until 10:30 o'clock at night and longer with special permission from the individual dormitory's governing board.

The possession of liquor in the rooms is not barred by the new ruling.

The adoption of the plan will be optional with each dormitory, and will become effective in the approving dormitories after petitions have been circulated.

The Washington SIDESHOW

By George Rothwell Brown

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service).

Washington, Oct. 17 (US)—In the minds of political leaders of both parties in Washington is a very big question mark. The campaign has been conducted on both sides on the assumption that huge federal gifts and expenditures in all but 25 of the counties of the country would result in an overwhelming Democratic victory in November.

Democrats have counted on it. Republicans have bowed to it. The question mark is placed after this interrogation:

"Are the people who are receiving the government benefits numerically stronger than the people who will have to pay for them?"

The thought is disquieting to some of the more long-headed Democratic managers and candidates.

When the American Federation of Labor raised this question—although indirectly—in its October "monthly survey of business," it confined what a good many politicians have been thinking.

As large as is the number of people and families now on some sort of government relief, in every community the number of people and families who are not on the dole but who are feeling the pinch of steadily rising prices for the necessities of life, without corresponding increase in income, is materially larger. They constitute the class which has long held the political balance of power in America.

There is no precedent for today's lavish federal spending. Nearly an even century ago, in the Jackson administration in 1836, $28,000,000 of the treasury surplus was deposited with the states "with no expectation of being recalled." That, however, formed no precedent. But neither is there a precedent for the American people, voting in gratitude for lavish federal favors heaped upon them from Washington. It is merely assumed by the politicians of both parties that that is "the way the American people are going to act next month."

Non-partisan observers, and even critics of the administration, bring into Washington in these closing days of the campaign reports that the President's popularity in the country remains at high water mark. In the last analysis, this is probably a greater factor in the campaign than the money.

There was much curiosity in Washington as to how the Supreme Court divided when it refused to review the case brought by Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., involving the cancellation of air-mail contracts last February. Of course, that wasn't disclosed, and in such cases never is.

The public learns how the Supreme Court divides only when a decision is handed down from the bench, and a dissenting opinion is read. After a case is argued it is taken up, on the first Saturday thereafter, in the "conference room" where the justices assemble, a small room in the Capitol, on the floor below the courtroom and next to the Senate barber shop.

Here the case is voted upon in secret. Nobody is admitted to the room but the justices themselves. Some years ago they used to let the page boys in, but even these are now excluded. After the vote the chief justice assigns some particular judge to write the decision of the majority of the court.

Many times that is as far as it ever goes, so far as the public knows. On the following Monday the decision is announced from the bench. If there is no dissenting opinion nobody ever knows how the court has divided. If there is a dissenting opinion some judge reads it, and usually announces at the end the names of the justices concurring with him in the dissenting opinion.

Young President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago, has been welcomed by the new dealers with open arms. He is their kind of a brain truster, and could have a room at the "little red house in Georgetown," as Fred Britten would say, if he wanted it.

Capital Goes on Parade

SOMNER DEATH ALIBIS GIVEN

Four defense witnesses at the trial of James Deshler for the murder of Adolph Sommer, aged Cambridge inventor, today supported the defendant's alibi that on the day of the crime he was at the Wrenmere Inn, Wrentham.

Sommer was slain during a payroll holdup at his Viecel plant in Cambridge on October 20 of last year. Three of the witnesses placed Deshler in Wrentham at about the hour of the crime.

Bertha Waterman of Wrentham testified at the trial in Middlesex Superior Court that Deshler arrived at her home at 1:30 and left a cross-cut saw to be repaired, returning for it the next day.

Charles B. Stokinger of Jamaica Plain, now a bartender in a Boston hotel, testified that on Oct. 20 he saw Deshler with others in the Wrentham woods, sawing logs, that he drove him to the Waterman home and back to the inn for lunch.

Licenses Suspended

An unannounced visit by the Somerville license commission resulted in the suspension of licenses for two cafes on Washington street, Somerville. The holders will appear before the commission tomorrow for a hearing on their alleged violations.

NEPONSET SET FOR OIL WAR

Residential Neponset's opposition to a proposed 1,200,000-gallon oil farm at 99 Taylor street will be registered before the street commissioners and the general public tomorrow in vigorous and unique fashion.

The street commissioners at 10:30 will hold a hearing at City Hall on application of the Neponset River Oil Company for the permit, and a motor cavalcade will carry protestants to the scene, with a traffic tieup probable in the vicinity of School, Washington and Tremont streets.

Buses have been chartered to carry the hundreds enlisted in the open fight against the proposed farm. They will leave the three points in Neponset at 9:30—Minot school, St. Ann's school and the corner of Walker and Walnut streets.

Scores of private cars will join the buses for the parade in town.

Leaders of church and civic life are heading the opposition fight. Among them are City Councillor Albert Fish, chairman of the protest committee; Rev. Fr. John A. O'Donnell, pastor of St. Ann's Church; Senator-elect Joseph Donahue, Representative-elect Bernard P. Casey and others.

On the sunny slopes of Smyrna.. in the fertile fields of Macedonia . . from the shores of the Black Sea.. that's where the best kinds grow.. the kinds used in making Chesterfields.

THERE are about as many kinds of Turkish tobacco as there are kinds of apples—but they all have a spicy aroma and flavor which seems to "season" a cigarette better than any other kind that grows.

The right Turkish is costly—but it adds something to Chesterfield's milder better taste.

ROOSEVELT IN NEW PLAN TO AID NEEDY

Washington, Oct. 17—President Roosevelt's relief recommendations to the 74th Congress will include a comprehensive program for new housing in the fields of slum clearance in the cities and subsistence homestead projects in the rural regions, it was announced today.

Details of the program are being worked out with Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins and Public Works Administrator Ickes.

The President said he considered this type of relief to be the best possible, as it gets rid of outright relief and gives people a chance to become self-supporting.

Roosevelt said it was inconceivable to him that persons unfortunate enough to be without work should be classified as "paupers" and thus denied their right to vote. He further expressed the belief that no court in the land would give countenance to such an "un-American procedure" by classifying a man as a pauper simply because he could not find employment.

NEW ENGLAND LAW SCORED

The President's remarks obviously were made in connection with stories recently published in some New England newspapers that consideration was being given to invoking the "poor laws" against indigent voters. Several New England states have such laws, dating back many years.

Spokesmen for the Republican National Committee recently denied with some heat that Republican leaders were concerned in any such "consideration."

Asked at his press conference if the housing program would fit in with the new public works program, the President replied it undoubtedly would.

At the same time Mr. Roosevelt said there was no inconsistency in moving industrial unemployed to small farms with the farm administration plan of limiting production because under the first arrangement the administration was trying to save human lives.

The President told of a conference he had yesterday with Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and two of his assistants who described two small farm relief projects in West Virginia and Arkansas.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

The President also disclosed a proposal, now being studied, whereby the federal government would pay the overhead cost of a national unemployment insurance setup, with capital and labor supplying the principal funds.

The President said that this is only one among the many plans that is under consideration. Some form of national unemployment insurance is expected to be presented to the 74th Congress.

'Kidnaped' Child Safe With Friends

Cheshire, Ct., Oct. 17 (AP)—Gloria Gennaro, eight, missing from home overnight, was not kidnaped as her family feared but stayed with two school mates whom she had accompanied to their home after school closed yesterday.

She rode back to school this morning in the town bus, unaware of the excitement in town, occasioned by an all-night search of state officers and constables for her.

Declared Sane in Shooting

WOMAN HELD IN TARR ATTACK

Gloucester, Oct. 17—Found to be normal mentally, Mrs. Helen Currier, 48, former art teacher in Boston schools, was held in $15,000 bail today on a charge of assault with intent to kill Frederick H. Tarr, Jr., local attorney, whom she is alleged to have shot on Monday.

Tarr's father, former United States attorney at Boston, appeared before Judge William Hatch and requested bail of $20,000. He argued that the defendant had been found sane by an examination last night and that she stated in the presence of an officer she had intended to kill his son.

beautifully dressed, plenty of money to spend, alleged to have stopped at a hotel with the murderer of King Alexander and a second conspirator in the case.

Her "unusually elegant luggage" is supposed to have contained the two sub-machine guns, each containing twenty bullets, that the murderer had with him when he sprang on the running board of the King's automobile.

A man from the Balkans landing in France might be suspected and searched, but what Frenchman would search the elegant luggage of a young Slav woman of extraordinary beauty?

While this country is "viewing with alarm" various things, including Communism, it might pay attention to its morons and congenital criminals and its stupid system of letting loose upon society known criminals more dangerous than any mad dog.

For instance, the New York Evening Journal tells, "A certain criminal moron named Stone, officially classed as feeble-minded seven years ago, confined in a Connecticut reformatory, had previously been in two other correctional institutions and had a record of robbery and thievery. Nevertheless he was turned loose upon society to see what else he could do."

The "what else" developed when newspapers printed the details of a horrible crime committed last Sunday. A little girl, five years old, was murdered, her body partially burned in a furnace. Stone, the released moron, confesses he burned the child's body.

There is a good deal of feeble-mindedness in so-called "civilized society" that allows such a dangerous creature to be at large, with his character well known.

Governor Lehman, running for re-election on the Democratic ticket in New York, "flays" the G. O. P. old guard.

That "old guard" turns and enthusiastically "flays" Governor Lehman.

The political party is on. Republicans who believe, some of them even bet, that Governor Lehman and his new era will be "rebuked" at this election will probably find it a very queer kind of "rebuke."

KILLER ENDS LIFE AFTER SLAYING TWO

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Oct. 17 (INS)—A fit of rage was blamed today for the killing last night of Mrs. Anna B. Moody, 65, and Dr. Nelson W. Johnson, 35, dentist and sportsman, by William Straight, 70, Johnson's stepfather, who later fatally shot himself.

The triple shooting climaxed a series of difficulties which had been preying on Straight's mind for several months, according to testimony by District Attorney Harold W. Main.

Mrs. Moody was believed to have incurred Straight's ill will when she interfered in a quarrel between Straight and Dr. Johnson.

KIDNAPER'S ARREST DUE AS VICTIM TELLS OF TORTURE

WIFE, FATHER HELD AS FEDERAL AGENTS PRESS SEARCH FOR ROBINSON

house he tied her up when he went out and put her in a closet, and released her when he returned.

"The apartment was modern and occupied the ground floor of a building."

Robinson was believed to be somewhere in the Midwest, and it was hoped some clue might be found in the apartment house in Indianapolis where Mrs. Stoll spent six harrowing days.

Mrs. Robinson was reported in police circles to have been taken there by federal agents to point out the apartment. The latter declined to say whether she was still here or in Indianapolis. Possible clues to her husband's whereabouts and to the missing part of the ransom money still are sought. Federal agents said only $500 had been recovered.

MRS. ROBINSON HELD

Mrs. Robinson, who was taken in custody for questioning last night after Mrs. Stoll was found by federal agents near Scottsburg, Ind., in company with her and two relatives of the Stoll family, was praised by the Stolls today as having protected the kidnap victim.

Mr. and Mrs. George Stoll went to the Federal building and consulted with Investigator Nathan.

"We came here as emissaries of Berry," said George Stoll. "He and we feel that Alice has been protected by Mrs. Robinson and that we want to do as much for her in return. I asked the authorities to do whatever possible to aid Mrs. Robinson's comfort."

It was with Mrs. Robinson that Mrs. Berry Stoll went yesterday to the Indianapolis home of the Rev. and Mrs. E Arnold Clegg, and telephoned her husband that she was safe. Mrs. Clegg is a relative of the Stolls and she and her husband had started to drive Mrs. Stoll home when federal agents overtook the car and Melvin Purvis of the Chicago Federal Bureau rode the remainder of the way with them.

ONLY $50 ACCOUNTED FOR

Robinson, 27-year-old "black sheep" of a respected Tennessee family, escaped with most of the $50,000 ransom money paid over by the Stoll family.

His young wife, had brought the money from the American Express Company office in Nashville to her husband in his Indianapolis hideaway, federal agents charged. She spent $50 for minor expenses and $450 of the ransom money was found on her person when she was arrested.

The unravelling of the mystery presented many bizarre features.

Mrs. Stoll was rescued by government operatives as she was apparently being brought back to her home in Louisville by Mrs. Robinson.

The Rev. E. Arnold Clegg, cousin of the Stoll family, and his wife, who were in the machine bearing Mrs. Stoll homeward. Dr. Clegg, pastor of a Methodist church in Indianapolis, was approached by Mrs. Robinson after her husband had fled. The clergyman and his wife, in the role of good Samaritans, immediately set forth for Louisville.

GIVEN FOOD, CLOTHES

At Scottsburg, Ind., about 20 miles from Louisville, federal agents swarmed out of two machines and found Mrs. Stoll.

Mrs. Stoll said that during her six days of imprisonment she was given sufficient food and was permitted to sleep in a clean bed. She had been given outer garments in place of her pajamas and negligee which she wore when kidnaped.

She said that when Robinson left the apartment, he would attach her, tie her up and put her in a closet.

When an automobile brought her back to her threshold, Berry Stoll, her husband, rushed out and carried her inside.

Mrs. William Speed, her mother, one of Kentucky's richest women, together with C. C. Stoll, her father-in-law, head of the Stoll Oil Refining Company, were present, as were all members of the family clans.

ORDERED TO BED

The festive atmosphere continued until the Stoll family physician suggested that Mrs. Stoll should go to bed. She said:

"I feel all right, but I am very tired."

Robinson, a former law student at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee, had been arrested several times on charges of impersonating an officer, burglary and attacking women. He was committed for a brief period to the state hospital for insane at Nashville. Upon his release, his father pleaded with his friend, C. C. Stoll, to give his son a new start in life.

He was employed in a filling station in Louisville owned by the Stoll Refining Company. It was reported he nursed a grudge against the Stoll family when he left their employ after being turned down for promotion.

RANSOM SENT BY EXPRESS

The $50,000 asked as ransom money was sent to Nashville by American Railway Express last Friday. A federal agent, disguised as a messenger, notified the Robinson home that a package was awaiting them. The money was not called for until Tuesday.

Harold Nathan, head of the Department of Justice agents working on the case, said the father of Robinson turned the package over to the wife of his son.

The money finally exchanged hands and Mrs. Robinson left by train to give it to her husband. She was trailed on a train to Terra Haute, Ind., early Tuesday morning. In that city a federal agent disguised himself as a taxicab driver and attempted to get her into his cab. She hesitated and took another machine. Mrs. Robinson was then followed to Indianapolis on Tuesday afternoon.

Apparently the trail was lost somewhere in Indianapolis. Mrs. Robinson met her husband, turned over the money and was given custody of Mrs. Stoll. Robinson disappeared.

When Mrs. Stoll was taken to the home of the Rev. Clegg, she immediately telephoned her home in Louisville. The telephone call was reported by an alert telephone operator and when the party left for Louisville automobiles crammed with federal agents were behind them.

At Scottsburg the agents closed in and took over the victim.

Preacher, Baby in Stoll Kidnaping

THE REV. ARNOLD CLEGG

Pretty baby of the Robinson pair. This photograph came from the woman in custody. At the moment the baby's name is not available, the negative having been rushed to Boston by airplane by the International News Photograph Service. The part played in the case by the Rev. Clegg, Methodist Episcopal minister, and his wife is only that of agreeing to take Mrs. Stoll to Louisville after Mrs. Robinson and the kidnaped woman had called at the parsonage and Mrs. Stoll had made a phone call to Louisville. En route the federal men joined the returning group.

Man Held in Woman Death 'Explains' Stoll Angle

By Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 17 — Police said today that Albert Annan, held in the death of Mrs. Ottila Griffin, 45, in which a possible connection with the Stoll kidnaping case in Louisville, Ky., was seen, had admitted he struck the woman yesterday in a drunken argument.

Annan said they had been living together for four years.

Annan told police, they said, that he is the husband of Beulah Annan, who was tried and acquitted about ten years ago in the death of Harry Kalstedt. She pleaded self defense.

The case gained wide publicity at the time because Mrs. Annan allegedly sat with the body and played a phonograph.

Mrs. Griffin was found dead yesterday on a southside flat, blood flowing from her mouth and nose.

The Stoll angle was injected by a mysterious telephone call while police were in the flat. An officer answered the phone and a woman's voice said:

"Whatever you do, get word to Al that Mrs. Stoll is back."

Police said Annan accounted for his interest in the Stoll case because he had attended Sunday school as a boy and that either the father or the granddaather of the kidnaped woman's husband was his teacher, in Louisville.

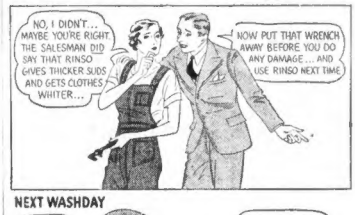

A note signed by Ruth A. Annan, 1603 S. Ford, Louisville, was found in the flat. It read:

"Dear Al: Your letter arrived today. Mrs. Stoll hasn't been found yet."

Annan told police the writer of the note was his sister.

Edsell Ford Gets $5,000 Threat; Suspect Held

tle Ford Motor Company for 16 years. He has four children.

Numerous letters in a vein similar to the one of October 8 have been received by members of the Ford family, but virtually all of them have been put down as the work of "cranks." So far as police could recall, this is the only attempted Ford extortion case in which an arrest has been made.

The note sent to Edsel Ford nine days ago read:

"You are on the spot, and if you want to live it will cost you $5000, we've had it in for you for a long time. All you have to do is to get the money in $5 and $10 bills and put the money in a candy box and have it on the porch of 2311 Medbury Avenue —the rear porch—There are two porches, leave the money on the first porch you come to and if the police find out about this letter they may get me but my boys will get you and if the money is not there you will get killed.

"Have the money there on October 12, 1934, at 11 p. m. sharp.

"If you let the police know you will be killed.

"And P. S., the house is on Medbury between Elmwood and Moran."

Two Davenport Men Get Kidnap Threats

By International News Service

Davenport, Ia., Oct. 17—The dark shadow of organized kidnaping and extortion entered Iowa again today when police revealed two wealthy Davenport men received threatening notes, demanding money, during the last week.

Both intended victims, Roland H. Harned, head of a large department store, and Professor W. E. Soderberg, of Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill., across the Mississippi, have ignored the notes and turned them over to authorities, police said.

Junk Man Blamed in N. Y. Kidnaping

New York, Oct. 17—Bitter rivalry among Bronx junk dealers was advanced today as the motive for the kidnaping of Louis Esposito, whose father is one of the most powerful figures in that business in the city.

Amiell Esposito, uncle of the 25-year-old youth, said he believes a disgruntled competitor of Anthony Esposito the father, has engineered the crime for money.

No word has been heard from either the youth or his captors, so far as police know.

Relatives of the youth informed detectives only after they had failed in an attempt to keep a rendezvous with a "woman with a mole," who had been designated by the abductors as a go-between.

The missing man left his home at 6 p. m., Monday to drive his grandfather to the latter's home a few blocks distant.

STOLL SUSPECT SOUGHT HERE

Boston police today received an alarm from Louisville, Ky., authorities that the Stoll kidnap car was heading for New England, possibly this city. The message was:

"Wanted in kidnaping of Alice Stoll, occupants of a 1933 V-8 two-door sedan, Illinois registration plates 331,700. Car has yellow wheels, black body. Probably property of Midwest Drivyurself Company, 28 West Lake street, Chicago. Reported stolen September 26, 1934, in Detroit.

"Information received that occupants, this car, headed for New England."

FOOD EXHIBITS DRAW CROWDS

With a large crowd in attendance, the Boston food show, sponsored by retail grocers, opened in Mechanics building today. National and local exhibitors had every inch of space covered with products.

A feature of the show is a display of the Department of Agriculture, showing all the varieties of fish caught in New England waters.

The show is open until 10 o'clock each night. A program of entertainment is presented.

The demand for space at the show by exhibitors indicates, officials said, an optimistic outlook for business.

U. S. AGENTS TELL INSIDE STORY OF STOLL KIDNAPING

GIRL ATTACK RECORD LAID TO SUSPECT

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 17—The story of a six-day quest to free Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll from the hands of an insane and brutal kidnaper was told today by Department of Justice men.

The ace detectives, who have struck blow after blow at the kidnap racket, were confident that they would soon seize Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., 27-year-old former attorney's clerk, who is named as the kidnaper.

"Additional arrests are expected in the near future," the department also announced, but it declined to name the other suspects.

Agents made clear that almost from the very first day of the case they felt certain that Robinson was the kidnaper. They had no doubt they would catch him—but they were driven to a terrific pace by the fear that Mrs. Stoll would be killed before they could reach their goal.

REPUTATION KNOWN

To account for this fear, they pointed to the fact that the kidnaper slugged the wealthy Louisville woman with an iron pipe before carrying her off from her home. They said Robinson had been accused of robbery and of attempted attack on young girls in or near Nashville, Tenn. It was after one of the robbery charges were brought against him that he spent a period in the state insane asylum at Nashville.

As signs of Robinson's feeble intellect, officials pointed to finger-prints left on the ransom letter and the fact that the note named "T. H. Robinson" as intermediary. This is the name of the youth's father. The elder Robinson's address in Nashville was given in the letter, making it doubly easy for the agents to begin their work of tracing.

NOTE IS REVEALED

Payment of the ransom to Mrs. Robinson by her father-in-law was described by the department of justice statement in these words:

"On October 15, Mr. Berry V. Stoll received a letter, dated at Indianapolis, October 14, in the handwriting of his kidnaped wife, through Mr. W. S. Speed, the father of the victim, stating in effect that the kidnaper believed the intermediary, T. H. Robinson, was being watched so that he could not deliver the ransom money to his daughter-in-law who, in turn, would deliver the money to the kidnaper, and further that the kidnaper would not accept any person other than this daughter-in-law of the intermediary to deliver the money.

"In accordance with these instructions, the ransom money was paid over by the Stoll family to Mrs. Frances Robinson, the wife of T. H. Robinson, Jr., and daughter-in-law of the intermediary, during the afternoon of October 15, and during the evening of the same date she proceeded directly to Indianapolis.

"Through the investigative activity of special agents of the division of investigation, United States Department of Justice, Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll was located on October 16, at approximately 9 p. m., at Scottsboro, Ind., where she was taken under the protection of division agents. At the time Mrs. Stoll was located she was accompanied by Mrs. Frances Robinson, wife of T. H. Robinson, Jr., and was in the company of the Rev. Arnold Clegg and Mrs. Arnold Clegg."

SURGEONS TOLD OF NEW GLAND TREATMENT

Living glands can now be cut from a body of one person, preserved alive for 10 days in a chemical solution, accustomed to conditions they are to meet in the body of the patient to be treated, then "planted" near that patient's bloodstream.

With that discovery, one of the most important strides in modern medical science has been taken. Diseases, ordinarily fatal, may be treated successfully.

The discovery was made by Dr. Harvey Stone of Baltimore, Md., and explained to 1500 surgeons in their congress here at Hotel Statler in a report on his successful experiments by Dr. Stone.

So far, the doctor explained, the living gland transference by this method is confined to the thyroid and parathyroid glands. In time, with this new field of technique opened, other glands may be included.

The present method allows for treatment of tetany, a disease that causes muscular twitching, generally of the upper lip, then of the extremities; of myxedema, that causes dullness of the intellect and slow speech; of Addison's disease, that causes emaciation, anemia and general weakness. Tetany and Addison's disease are fatal if not treated.

Dr. Stone's "living graft" method replaces the methods heretofore used. They have not been considered successful since they required immediate grafting of a gland from one body to another.

The reason these glands are so important to physical well-being is because they largely regulate the supply of calcium in the bloodstream. Calcium is indispensable to life.

The Stone technique is as follows:

The gland is cut from a living person or one dead but a short time, minced into tiny fragments and placed in a chemical solution equivalent to normal blood.

Then serum, or blood from the patient to be treated, is introduced. The gland thus becomes accustomed to the conditions it is to meet. This is an all-important step.

Finally a cut is made in the patient. Dr. Stone believes that the armpit or the groin are the best places. The gland fragments are injected. The cut is sewed up.

Dr. Stone showed a series of plates with microscopic photographs of the gross-grafting experiments. He pointed out:

"It is clear that this tissue is living, healthy and apparently functioning."

Such glands have been living thus far for 18 months in one case and in fact, have increased in size, the doctor declared.

BOSTON DOCTOR FINDS CURB TO PERITONITIS

An almost certain preventive of peritonitis, the greatest risk in a surgical operation, was announced to the clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons here today.

The preventive, which is a vaccine prepared from cows and known as amniotic fluid, is the result of observations made by Dr. Herbert L. Johnson of Boston during caesarean operations and was developed with the aid of half a dozen other Boston surgeons.

17 YEARS OF TESTS MADE

Dr. Johnson told the assembled surgeons today that he had noticed that peritonitis and abdominal lesions were comparatively rare during caesarians. Several years of study led to the conclusion that this immunity was due to the amniotic fluid which surrounds a child before birth and is also present in the higher animals.

Years of animal experimentation followed, in which Dr. Johnson was assisted by Dr. Shields Warren and Medical Examiner J. Stewart Rooney. A concentrated fraction of the fluid was finally developed from cows.

CUTS DEATH RATE

Clinical work, tests on humans, was then undertaken under the supervision of Drs. Daniel Fiske Jones, Edward L. Young, Jr., Arthur Kimpton, Halsey Loder, Nathaniel Mason, Edward J. Leonard and Leland McKitrick, all of Boston.

About two years ago Dr. Young, who is surgeon-in-chief at Faulkner Hospital, used the fluid as a vaccine in the abdominal cavity before operations, making injections about six hours before cutting.

As a result, he was able to report today that the new measure has reduced the death rate from peritonitis from 30 per cent to 2 per cent.

Funeral Rites for Phelan Announced for Friday

Last rites for James J. Phelan, Boston banker, philanthropist and outstanding Catholic layman in America, will be conducted Friday morning with a solemn high mass of requiem, probably in the Immaculate Conception Church, Harrison avenue, it was announced today.

Pending the return of his son, James, Jr., from Detroit today, plans necessarily were tentative.

Figures in public, ecclesiastical, business and professional life from all over the United States are expected here for the obsequies.

Because Cardinal O'Connell is now in Rome, it is believed that the celebrant of the requiem mass may be either Bishop Francis J. Spellman, Reverend Louis J. Gallagher, president of Boston College or Monsignor Richard J. Haberlin, vicar-general of the Boston archdiocese.

Mr. Phelan was the first American to be decorated by Pope Pius IX as a Knight of Malta and he headed that order in this country. In 1931 he was given the Lastare Medal by Notre Dame University as the outstanding Catholic layman in America.

He was senior partner of Hornblower & Weeks, one of the most powerful of financial houses.

CONANT GETS 2 GIRLS FREED

President Conant of Harvard today saved from prosecution two Cambridge girls arrested during the anti-Nazi demonstration at the Harvard commencement last June.

At his request, charges against Nora Burke, 20, of Central Square, and Sheila Shugrue, 18, of Massachusetts avenue, were nol prossed.

In lower court they appealed 30-day sentences to the house of correction and fines of $5 each.

The demonstration resulted from the visit of Ernst Hanfstaengl, Harvard graduate and Hitler aide whose proffer of a scholarship to his alma mater was recently declined by President Conant.

The cases of seven other defendants arrested during the demonstration were called in superior court on appeal and set for hearing on Monday.

PUBLIC TO HEAR CANCER TALKS

With two recognized research specialists in the field of cancer scheduled to speak, the public will be admitted to Boston Arena tonight in probably the most unusual feature of the congress of the American College of Surgeons being held here.

Dr. Clarence Cook Little of New York will speak on "Cancer—Its Prevention and Control." Dr. Charles A. Dukes of Oakland, Cal., will have as his topic, "Cancer—Its Curability."

Both will use terms and language adapted for the layman. Their addresses, couched in popular English, will be interesting, thoroughly non-technical.

This Arena public meeting is the crowning feature of today, which is given over almost wholly to the study of one of the most dreaded of human diseases—cancer.

Dr. Franklin H. Martin of Chicago, director-general of the American College of Surgeons, is to cover the general topic of curability of cancer.

Another group of specialists and researchers will follow by outlining the present accepted methods of treatment of the disease, pointing out their good qualities and defects.

At the Arena meeting, Dr. Robert B. Greenough of Boston, new president of the Surgeons' Association, will preside.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN TO STICK TO PANTOMIME IN HIS NEXT FILM RELEASE

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

In my rave notice of "Life Begins at 8:40," the smashing musical success which played all too briefly at the Shubert Theater, in preparation for its run at Winter Garden, New York, I interjected the ques: "What has become of Aarons and Freedley?"

Ruth Draper

That is, I think it was in my review of "Life Begins at 8:40," although it may have been in the glowing review accorded "As Thousands Cheer."

That a show which stayed a fourth week in Boston giving employment at the Shubert Theater to many local stage hands and musicians which they would not have had, partly because Sam H. Harris and Irving Berlin asked my opinion of the probable box-office draft of their great revue, I begged them to keep the show in Boston an added week.

If, the possibility that I am wrong without consulting depleted personal files, the question about Aarons and Freedley was not asked in my somewhat informal, somewhat readable, and altogether acclamatory reviews of these two shows, it was put definitely in some column devoted to the theater and its activities of recent date.

Aarons and Freedley was the combination of two young men in the theater who produced a succession of musical successes, all done tastefully, expensively and with good casts. "Lady, Be Good" was one of their earliest. "Tip-toes" was another, and "Funny Face" another. The combination was split, and a famous name lost to the art. In answer to my question about these producers' whereabouts, I received a letter from Vinton Freedley, a young gentleman who walked out of Harvard into theatrical success, telling me that he was preparing a show with Ethel Merman, William Gaxton and Victor Moore in the cast, and that the show was coming to Boston on or around November 1. I printed the news, past acquaintance with Mr. Freedley assuring me that he was a man of his word as well of the theater.

The good news is true in every particular, with additional particulars now available. The show is called "Anything Goes," and Ethel Merman, William Gaxton and Victor Moore are in the cast, and Bettina Hall, who appeared here in "The Cat and the Fiddle," is an added starter. The show will come to the Colonial Theater on Monday, November 5, reopening Boston's famous musical house a few weeks only after the tremendous success of "Roberta."

More important than the casting items—to me—is the creative talent engaged by Mr. Freedley. Cole Porter, who wrote "Night and Day," the song which is making every audience at Keith's Memorial Theater applaud its simple interpretation by Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, in "The Gay Divorcee," has written the score for "Anything Goes." Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse have written the books and lyrics. Here may be, with the substitution of Cole Porter for Jerome Kern, a rebirth of the famous Princess Theater musical comedy writing-trio.

Mrs. Pat Campbell Assigned Role in Chaplin Picture; Roach's Gift to Kiddies

Los Angeles, Oct. 17—The children in "Our Gang" comedies have played such a part in Hal Roach's success that now he feels he'd like to show his appreciation. So he has presented the entire set of "Babes in Toyland" to the children of Los Angeles. There is the huge shoe of "the old woman who had so many children she didn't know what to do"; and all the Mother Goose characters so dear to the heart of any youngster.

Hal has written the board of park commissioners, suggesting that they find a place in Griffith Park for the sets, believing it would be an ideal place for the poor children of the city to have their Christmas. Laurel and Hardy will dedicate the gift if the park commissioners see fit to accept it.

Charlie Chaplin says he will not talk in his next picture. In explaining his reason he says that his characterization of the tramp can only be played in pantomime and he would no more talk than would a statue in a church or a public park open his lips and give utterance to words. The Chaplin studio has no sound equipment and should Charlie or his cast talk the company would have to go to United Artists and make pictures, or he would have to go to the expense of putting in sound. Mrs. Pat Campbell has been personally signed by Charlie to play a part in his picture. That's good news for her and for the picture.

The fans win once more. They want Charlie Farrell and Janet Gaynor together, so Charlie is hurrying home to play opposite Janet in her next picture. Charlie's wife, Virginia Valli, was doing a lot of scurrying around today to get her house ready for Charlie. Seems Bette Davis had already rented it, but Bette was a good scout and moved out. The "Abdul Hammad" picture, which took so many of our Americans to England, was postponed and Charlie waited around so long that he lost out on the Elizabeth Bergner picture. So now he is coming back and Virginia couldn't be happier on account of she likes Hollywood and Charlie, too.

Fredric March, who is always bored when referred to as handsome, won't need to worry in "Les Miserables." Darryl Zanuck tells me Freddie's makeup as Jean Valjean will be just as grotesque as was his famous "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" characterizations. W. P. Lipscomb, co-author with R. J. Minney of Ronald Colman's "Clive of India," is writing the March scrip—and it will be Freddie's first when he and Florence return from their holiday in the South Seas.

Hollywood has gone Show Boat crazy. The studios are all having a crack at this form of entertainment, which lends itself to charming dances, songs and romances. "Georgiana," Ann Sothern's next, which Victor Schertzinger directs, is all about a show boat, based on an original by Sidney Buchman. If my count is correct, this is the third Show Boat opera. Who next? George Murphy, who was loaned to Eddie Cantor for "Kid Millions," plays opposite Ann Sothern in "Georgiana."

The story is of an international jewel robbery, and is set against the background of Biarritz, San Sebastien, Ronda, Paris, the Pyrenees and Madrid. Jean Gabin has the leading role opposite the star, and there are English sub-titles provided. The picture with the same Miss Helm as the charming adventuress was also made in German, and shown under the title "Those Happy Days."

The program is sponsored by the Adult Education Council, and among the short subjects billed are the second picture in the music series titled "The Woodwinds," the second geological film, "The Wearing Away of the Land," a Swedish travelogue, "Nordlinger," and a Mickey Mouse cartoon.

Huge Telescope Mirror Useless

Springfield, Oct. 17—That huge 200-inch telescope mirror that had to cool by infinitesimal degrees to prevent flaws, and had to be handled by a corps of trained glassworkers with the delicacy usually associated with Swiss watchmaking, was finally completed and pronounced perfect—but it can never be used.

The casting rods that supported it melted into the holes and can't be ground out, Dr. O. Amgage, head of the Corning Glassworks, where the mirror was made, said here today. A new mirror will be started this year.

'Colonial Cruiser' Still Goes Strong

Proving once again that the modern automobile can "take it," the Hudson-Terraplane "Colonial Cruiser" today ended the fourth lap of its 16,000-mile "ruggedness run" here exactly on schedule.

The car, driven 24 hours a day since October 9, arrived at the Henley-Kimball plant, 650 Beacon street, Back Bay, at 7:30 a. m., and a few minutes later was again on its way. Throughout the run, which will end here a week from Thursday, the car will be refueled by Amoco service stations.

This Ear—That Air

By N. F. T.

Luncheons, such as the local NBC spread yesterday afternoon at the Ritz-Carlton, generally result in the release of inside information other than that which is actually designed for divulging. Even if attending scribes extract it by application of the journalistic query method.

All of which brings us (and I wish everyone could have been there) to the point of herewith expressing confidence that some bigger and better programs are due in the days to his neck of the nation. Ways and means for making more of the Boston talent available have been determined upon . . . the bosses of a WBZ-WBZA sound . . . John A. Holman who . . . not so very much unlike Steve Fitzgibbon, John McNamara who might well pass for Walter Hampden, the actor and George Harder who bears more than passing resemblance to, let's see now, well I'd say James Montgomery Flagg the portrait painter. Let 'em all sue me!

N. F. T.

But aside from likenesses one to another, and reverting to the selected subject, these aforementioned men are really entering upon an effort for which they are to be commended. Even the outline of their institutional ideas is of interest. It follows that the successful working out of them will . . . professional cheers aplenty in . . . radio artist ranks.

They propose to put more programs on the network, meaning coast to coast, with Boston as the originating point. This they figure . . . by shaping studio shows of high standard such as are staged in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Hollywood and other major cities to the South and West. That means a greater measure of opportunity for aspiring broadcasters in this man's town. Allowing all due respect to their enterprise which I trust I have adequately reflected, I also take occasion to state it's about time.

One of the most talked of songstress personalities in New York air attraction circles is one Katharine Parsons. While in Gotham not long ago this worshipper of well developed technique in any line of endeavor, heard Miss Parsons performing through WINS facilities. Tonight, her voice is to be wafted out over the newly formed American Broadcasting System network. As a song stylist her personality is far and away above par.

Listeners should like the new "Liberty Forum" feature starring Edwin C. Hill. This unique turn comes to the atmosphere tomorrow night (WNAC) as of 8:30.

You Hear Her on Your Radio

Rowene Williams . . . the blonde 20,000 to 1 long-shot . . . Who now is on the "Hollywood Hotel" program . . . With Louella Parsons . . . And El Brendel . . . And other movie stars . . . Because she out-acted . . . and out-sang . . . Just 20,000 other girls . . . In a contest for the role . . . That of the ingenue.

Rowene is an Empire State girl . . . Born in Buffalo . . . On June 14, 1906 . . . But brought up mainly in Chicago . . . And in Minneapolis . . . Attending high school . . . And business college . . . In the latter city . . . Where her father was a hotel manager . . . And allowed her to sing at banquets . . .

ROWENE WILLIAMS

In business college she lasted only four months . . . Becoming convinced that she did not want to be a business woman . . . But would rather be an actress . . . Or a singer . . . And she found a niche with the Luigi Lombardi Symphony Orchestra . . . As a soloist . . . When she was 18 . . . Shifting later to the Twin City Civic Opera Company . . . Singing leads . . . And going out over the air . . . From WCCO . . . The Minneapolis outlet.

She moved to Chicago . . . Last spring . . . To concentrate on radio work . . . And was just beginning to be noticed . . . When she heard of the "Hollywood Hotel" auditions . . . Being held by all Columbia stations . . . And she enrolled . . . Against the other contestants . . . Who ultimately numbered 20,000 . . . Rowene being one of 12 chosen for the New York finals . . . And being picked No. 1 there . . . So hooray.

Rowene is still a single lady . . . Is five feet six . . . Weighs 134 . . . Speaks Italian, French and German . . . Has no time for hobbies . . .

Tomorrow's Radio Personality Portrait will be that of Don Bestor, the KDKA Kid.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Threat Notes Stir Newton

Notes signed "Death" and warning that tragedy will befall those living in the houses at which they are mysteriously left, have been alarming residents of Webster street, West Newton, for several days.

Police believe the notes, all printed in a scrawling hand, and tucked under doors, are the work of a person mentally deranged or afflicted with a peculiar and perverted sense of humor.

One read, "A great tragedy will befall this house within 24 hours." Another warned, "Something terrible will happen to you soon."

The anticipated divorce would sever a union of 35 years, which has weathered such spectacular vicissitudes as the Russian revolution, with its seizure of the vast Cantacuzene estates.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1934

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

I have just received some publicity from the Judge Baker Guidance Center, "a service for childhood and youth, established by Frederick P. Cabot as a center for diagnosis, advice and treatment for all agencies dealing with young people and with families so that they may better know the nature of the human material with which they work.

R. E. Rogers

It offers to each child taken to it at 38 Beacon street a careful physical examination, psychological examination, study by psychiatric social worker of the background of the child, its health history, family conditions, school and recreational life, neighborhood conditions, and work record." Also interviews with psychiatrist, staff conferences on procedure, psychiatric treatment of child and parents, cooperative treatment with welfare agency, etc., the whole business directed toward making the child over into a normal personality.

My feeling on perusing this excessively scientific program is that it may be admirable for a comparatively small number of thoroughly abnormal children. But for the reasonably normal child I have a feeling that I should take every chance, rather than let this organization get its hands on it. In this, of course, I am absolutely at odds with the majority of the young college-bred intellectuals who are now engaged in raising families.

When I read the list of the habits and tendencies which the foundation believes ought to be rooted out of children, I am surprised and shocked to find the following:

"Nervous mannerisms, fears, over-dependence on adults, sensitiveness, moodiness, indifference, stubbornness, day-dreaming, shyness and withdrawal, unpopularity with other children, jealousy, selfishness, overaggressiveness, show-off behavior, fighting, teasing, bullying, disobedience, restlessness, overactivity, cruelty, destructiveness and temper tantrums."

If I was being asked, which I am not, I should say, "put all these together and they make a perfectly normal human being, of the sort likely to grow up to be successful and even brilliant adults."

Take all these away, and what have you left? A normal child? No, because a normal child exhibits most of these qualities. A thoroughly abnormal child, I should say, utterly docile, utterly obedient, completely "conditioned," in a pattern which seems to me thoroughly colorless and negative, a genuine robot who will grow up without that individuality or even that eccentricity which alone produces effective conduct.

I am irresistibly reminded of Aldous Huxley's Utopian children conditioned to be content with the state to which science has called them; the Alpha intellectuals, the Beta executives, the Gamma white-collar workers, the Delta laborers, and the Epsilon dwarfs and morons for the merely mechanical and repetitive jobs.

If this folder means anything, it means that the ideal of psychological science is to produce children as completely lacking the variations in normal human nature as is possible to the human animal, and to reduce them to the status of one of William Dean Howells' ideal Bostonians of the year 1880, say his Lawyer Atherton, who passes final judgment on human nature at the end of "A Modern Instance."

There is in Bernard DeVoto's brilliant new novel, "We Accept With Pleasure," which I want to write about soon, a portrait of a young mother in whom the accepted jargon of the psychiatrists struggles with a humorous common sense. When her small son Richard sprays a spoonful of cereal across his table top, Libby remarks:

"I'm a modern parent, Dicky, one and three-quarters times, and I'm emancipated. I wouldn't want to give you a bad fixation, but I'll whale hell out of you if you don't eat faster . . ."

One is permitted, as Matthew Arnold would say, to find that refreshing. Or the irony in this:

"On the day when Elizabeth, pulling herself up by a chair, first stood without support, Libby swept the child into her arms, kissed her frantically and marched round the room with her in triumph. Then she stopped. She put the baby down. 'That's smart of you, Elizabeth, but Mother is not impressed,' she said. 'Mother had damn well better not be impressed. Or when you get to boarding school you're likely to lure some giggling blonde into bed with you. Oh, it's hooey! It's the most terrible drip! How can it be wrong to love your kids? Time was when a mother kissing her child was held to be the maximum in pure holiness, now it's just a process in the Oedipus Complex."

The hope of America, I take it, will be the next generation of the children of the young intellectuals, who will rebel violently against the way they were brought up under psychiatrists—and who will gayly go back to the methods of child-raising of the General Grant period. I give the child psychologists about 20 years more before the ashcart receives them.

Operations Sexless; Women Use Knife

GETS $15,000 BANDAGE FOR WOUNDED HEART

Awarded $15,000 of the $100,000 for which she sued Dr. Cyrus Dimitri Comninos of Boston and Groton, Edna May Renke, above, was back on her job today as secretary to a New York business man. Just an old Greek custom, the doctor called his gallant gesture of kissing her feet, but the jury decided it was worth money, after hearing his fervid love missives. Secret Told

SKILL OF MEN IS ADMITTED

SUCCESS LAID TO INDIVIDUAL

It isn't the sex that makes the surgeon successful, because women, married or single, have just as much chance to get ahead in the surgical world as any man. And they do.

Such is the observation of Dr. Clara A. March of Buffalo, N. Y., who was attending the congress of the American College of Surgeons at the Hotel Statler today.

Dr March is an ophthalmologist, which is a medico specializing in functions and diseases of the eye. She is also a fellow of the college of surgeons. Therefore she should know whereof she speaks.

Questioned about women in surgery, Dr. March said:

"To my mind it makes little difference whether the surgeon is a man or a woman. I really believe that success is a matter wholly dependent on the individual himself—or herself, if you want to put it that way.

Men Cooks

"You know that a great many men are our best cooks and dressmakers.

"I have found that children are quick to place confidence in a woman doctor. The women are more gentle in their treatment of patients. I do not say that there are men who are not more gentle than women physicians."

She was asked:

"Does marriage interfere with the medical or surgical career of a woman?"

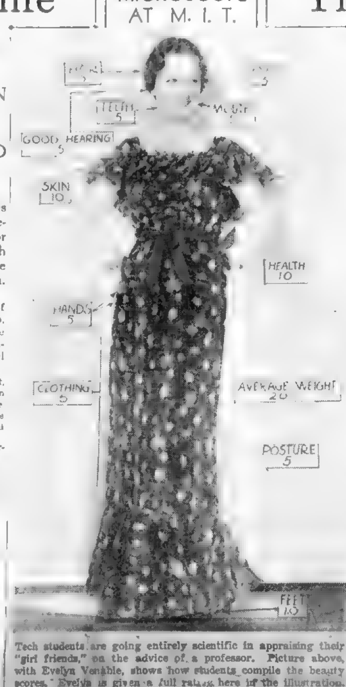

"No, I don't believe so. Again I say it depends on the individual. No, I am not married.

"Many laymen have a mistaken impression that a surgeon's greatness is determined by the number of operations he performs. One of the primary principles of the American College of Surgeons is, 'Less Surgery and Better Surgery.'"

Tiffs, Takes Poison

Rose Bernardi, 19, of 60 Murdock street, Somerville, quarreled with her boy friend, and then went out and took poison, according to police. She was taken to the Somerville hospital, where she is said to have a good chance of recovery.

ESCAPES "BEATING UP"

Mrs. Connor Safe After Threats

Mrs. Hannah M. Connor of Milton was back home from Worcester today with no damage done to her, but breathing sighs of relief that threats she claimed to have received didn't materialize.

The president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Owners' Association was making a political speech on the Worcester Common, together with Paul Hunt of Brookline, when she asked police protection.

She said she was warned that she would be beaten up. Hunt said he was told he would be shot.

Worcester police escorted the pair to the city limits and the state police and two detectives escorted them the rest of the way home.

RICHARD MONTANA, of Aldrich street, Roslindale, shown on the bed, holds the next best thing to a job—dreaming. For 10 hours a day, Montana lies on this bed to demonstrate a new type of pivot leg splint, now on display at the American College of Surgeons' clinical congress. "Whatta life, whatta life," remarked Montana. Watching the exhibit are Mary McDermott, of Jamaica Plain; Bernadine MacDowell, Mary Hefferan, of Dorchester, and J. R. Siehrandts. DYE VICTIM

HIS FACE BLUE

OXYGEN WORKS

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 17—Poison, which physicians blamed on a pair of newly-dyed football shoes, caused William Ronan, 20, a Conshohocken athlete, to suffer from a rare malady.

With pores opened by exertion, his feet absorbed the dye. That evening he felt ill. His face was blue, though Ronan didn't know it.

A doctor took in the situation at a glance and surmised that the poison was absorbing the oxygen in the victim's blood.

After the patient was given quantities of oxygen at a hospital, he was declared improved.

Girls Worry Tech Men, The Beauty Critics

Expert's Fault

TOLD STUDENTS ABOUT FLAWS

LOOK 'EM OVER, HE WARNED

Girl friends of Tech students are looking with the cold and calculating eye of suspicion at the newest Technological research.

For Tech students are looking with the equally cold and calculating eye of analysis at their girl friends.

It was a professor in the hygiene and nutrition department who started the disquieting tendency to study the young women in the light of scientific knowledge, and check them critically for flaws.

Are they overweight? Are their eyes clear? Does their hair glisten? Do their mouths curl upward at the corners? Score five points for each.

In all there are 20 questions, and should the subject be found perfect in each of these particulars she will be adjudged beautiful, and presumably a fitting companion for a Technology student.

One point, however, that the professor and his earnest associates may have overlooked in their quest for perfection is that beauty is reputed to be "in the eye of the beholder."

If you want to check your own ideas of beauty with the Tech list you will find it appended here. Use as you see fit, and be it understood at your own risk.

Here's how Tech students will carefully rate girl friends, if they follow the scientific pointers given by one of their professors. If a girl rates a complete score, presumably she is "perfect."

1—Average weight for height (20 points).

2—Hair clean, free from oil, and becomingly arranged (5 points).

3—Eyes shining, alert, clear white, not "muddy" yellow (5 points).

4—Mouth happy, and not used to breathe through (5 points).

5—Teeth well cared for and reasonably regular (5 points).

6—Skin, lips natural color, tissue firm, skin under eyes smooth and clear (10 points).

7—Hands immaculately clean, cuticle and nails clean, no extreme shades of polish (5 points).

8—Feet free of prominent joint at big toe resulting from pointed shoes (10 points).

9—Posture erect, with shoulders level while standing, and abdomen flat (5 points).

10—Good lines and grace while seated, with hands in repose and knees almost touching (5 points).

11—Hearing good and able to hear conversation well at 16 feet (5 points).

12—Harmony of movement while walking, with elastic step (3 points).

13—Good vision and able to read at arm's length (2 points).

14—Health good, radiating enthusiasm and poise and inspiring others with confidence (10 points).

15—Clothing adapted in line, and suitable to the season and occasion (5 points).

HERO DOG

Discovers Boy

Westminster, Oct. 17—A cordon of searchers that stretched out in a mile radius through the woods here failed to find 2-year-old Roger Herold, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Herold of State road, and it was left for a pet dog to discover the child.

Roger was calmly strolling more than a mile from home on Spring road when the dog, belonging to Mr and Mrs. Earl Baily, running ahead, noticed him and started to play. Baily brought the child back and returned him to his relieved parents.

GIRL FLIER DESPISES MYSTERY TITLE

By Associated Press

Mildenhall Airdrome, England, Oct. 17—Jacqueline Cochran of New York, an entrant in the England to Australia air race, does not appreciate the title "Mystery Woman" which English reporters have fixed upon her because of her seclusion since her arrival in this country.

When she and Wesley Smith, her pilot, arrived from Heston Airdrome, they hit the ground with such force the plane bounced high before settling. Scores of cameramen rushed to the machine to satisfy their curiosity about the "Mystery Woman."

Jacqueline Cochran

When she alighted attempts to draw her into conversation failed. Asked about her "mysterious disappearance" since her arrival, she replied smilingly:

"I do not know what all this fuss of mystery is about. I have had business to attend to and a lot of friends to visit. I do not like ballyhoo and do not want any."

American planes are rated high among the field of 20 aircraft massed for the world's longest air race, to begin Saturday with Melbourne as the goal.

SHUN BEER

Harvard Turns

BACK TO MILK

Taking it all in all, it appeared today that Harvard students were milk-fed, and repeal made a lot of talk, but little difference in their lives.

Figures released by the university authorities disclosed that the 900 sophomores, juniors and seniors of age and eligible to order beer in Harvard dining halls have consumed only an average of one bottle each for every three weeks. Freshmen can't buy beer.

On the other hand, Roy L. Westcott, manager of the dining halls, declared that milk is far and away the most popular beverage. It's drunk by the quart, and the average consumption is something for the milk dealers to cheer about, he asserted.

But, getting back to this beer business. In the Eliot House night grill, the students drank only an average of one bottle every two months.

The figures are from January to the close of the 1933 semester on June 18 and they indicate that Harvard will not realize even the amount paid out for its beer license. The university paid $900 for this license and in the period to June 18 there had been a profit of only $321.55.

Nice Fish

Lincoln, Ill., Oct. 17—William Fox and C. R. Rogers fished all summer with negligible results. About to give up for the season, they rowed out to a quiet spot in the Illinois river and a four-pound bass flopped into the boat beside them.

O. O. McIntyre
NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

New York, Oct. 17—Nothing has the excitement and newness of the first night of a new play by a new author featuring a new star. In two hours and a half lives are being made over if the play is a hit. In that short space the author becomes a man who can pay his debts and a celebrity.

O. O. McIntyre

He can follow the trail of all successful playwrights to the south of France. Those much better plays which no one would look at yesterday, can now be unloaded one by one. Fun[?] to pace the world. The dice so heavily loaded against him suddenly in a single roll show—a six and one.

And the star! Already in the first rows young and middle aged are classifying her as the unattainable. One for whom the world would well be lost. At 8:15 this very evening she was a struggler—up a bundle of nerves that might explode like firecrackers.

Tomorrow her name will be on every tongue. The curtain has fallen but they want her. So she comes down to the footlights, radiant, cool, elegant. Where are those nerves? Each movement is followed by hundreds of eyes. She has become a far greater drama than the play she has enacted.

Over a stretch of 10 years there is no New Yorker who has attended so many parties as Charles Hanson Towne. A bachelor, columnist, poet, story teller, he is considered an asset at every dinner table or midnight buffet of importance. Frank Crowninshield used to hold the bachelor dining-out record. But during the past few years, like Irvin Cobb making banquet speeches—he has grown more coy and reluctant. He appears at auspicious events only.

Elsa De Wolfe, interior decorator, is regarded by stylists as the best dressed woman among the middle aged in New York. Her sartorial metier is that of refined elegance achieved only by marked simplicity. The late Mrs. Lydig Hoyt attained a similar tone, as did also Maxine Elliott and Mrs. Fiske.

There's a distinct camaraderie about the lower East Side when the day's work is done. Life has a swing. Men lean from windows, women talk and shop and young girls who have hurriedly changed their work clothes trip along in their best, setting out for that nightly parade which, for lack of social occasions, is the only way they have of meeting young men their own age. On the East Side it is all conventional, proper. They halt in pairs before windows, two sheepish lads approach, raise their hats and they wander off mayhap to a movie or a bench in one of the triangular squares. Not an elegant way of meeting the man you may wed. But what can one do?

Billy Rose's spectacular upshoot in the amusement fireworks this summer and the just as sudden fall with a dull plink is not a new tale to the street. Rose, according to best reports, originated the idea of the $1.50 dinner, musical show, dancing combination that filled two theaters to capacity. Then for a rest he sailed away and came back, he says, to find his backers looking the other way. They seemed to remember Mr. Rose vaguely but could not somehow recall his name. Anyway, Rose dusted himself off and began to yell "Foul" and they had a new rag to chew in front of the Palace and Lindy's.

The stage has many sturdy players who never give a bad performance and without whose support stars would not shine with such effulgence. I think of the sturdy characterizations of that bluff Texan, Joe King. No one is so convincing as a Central Office dick. You remember his dramatic line to the forlorn maid in "Broadway"—"Pull yourself together, kid!" There are dozens of Joe Kings, too many mere program names. But they are the iron in the theater's blood without which it would be white corpuscled, anaemic.

Maurice Chevalier, bow-legged, oyster-eyed and undershot, excites more necking along New York streets than any film actor of the day. On stage and off, he is an astonishing example of personality's grip. A flick of his cane, tilt of hat or lift of an eyebrow under his supreme artistry become exciting.

From an Arizona Ramhorn: "McIntyre's column has become an elixir, medicining against many kinds of ills."

TWEEDS AND FURS NEED LILT OF BRIGHT YARNS AND FRIVOLOUS STITCHES

SWEATERS [illegible] and find it convenient, comfortable and smart. A wide rib knit and striped scarf collar are appealing. B[illegible] with gold, white and blue stripes.

A WHITE CHENILLE pattern dances merrily around this sweater of black wool. A turtle neck is made less boyishly severe [illegible]. P[illegible] eliminate waist gap.

A CLASSIC and youthful company: the twin sweaters, add a casually-tied cowboy kerchief and front-buttoned wool skirt. The felt, much like a riding hat, is of the same breezy spirit.

PEASANT in effect, with its tied neckline and vivid reds, yellows and greens rioting around the neckline, waist and sleeves. Blue lacy woven yarn reminds you of native handicraft.

Two Examples of Bad Bidding

Yesterday I gave a few examples of expe[illegible]. Since most of the time I f[illegible] jumps with magnificence [illegible] beautiful squeezes [illegible] another [illegible] of bad bid [illegible] would not be very [illegible] out of [illegible].

South was the dealer and held

He opened the bidding with one diamond and his partner responded with one heart [illegible] with a 6-4-2-1 distribution [illegible] a very fine diamond [illegible] with one notrump for no reason except that he wanted to play the hand. Over one notrump his partner bid four [illegible] South was [illegible] day. He now [illegible] — this time [illegible]. North was the dealer with neither side vulnerable, and for some peculiar reason decided to pass [illegible] hand. East passed and South opened the bidding with one heart, a sound bid despite the bad distribution. West overcalled one heart with one spade and North, having passed his comparative rock crusher originally, instead of jumping to at least three hearts or even better bidding four hearts, meekly bid two clubs. Had East passed to two clubs the bidding would have died [illegible]. However, East raised his partner to two spades and South and West passed. North now had an opportunity to redeem his previous underbids but still stubbornly [illegible] to take any strong action. [illegible] time he bid three hearts. East passed to three hearts and South of course had no choice but to do the same.

Obviously there is a very fine play for four hearts on this hand. If the trump finesse works or if the club Ace is in the West hand [illegible] is a laydown, or at least [illegible] one shot. But it so happened that West held the heart [illegible] and East the Club Ace and the Declarer was forced to lose one spade trick, two club tricks and [illegible] heart trick and just [illegible] of [illegible]. Naturally [illegible] else in the room [illegible] bid at [illegible] and went down [illegible] so the North [illegible] had three [illegible] of North's [illegible] conservative bidding. "We who are about to pound our respective ears salute you," Marion said. "I hope I get through tomorrow without committing murder, but if not, something might be worth the chair, don't you think, Carol?"

She only whispered the words but I put up a panicky hand for silence and she darted over to me and kissed me warmly.

"Don't worry, Auntie Madge. I'll restrain myself nobly," she promised and seizing Carol by the waist, swung her away to their room.

I waited [illegible] Dicky came upstairs before going into my room, where she had sent Avis.

"I haven't time to tell you what it's all about," I told him with magnificent disregard of rules or ending sentences, "but I want you to be ready to let Noel into the house quietly at one o'clock. He is coming back to see me at that time and no one but you must know."

House-Warming

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I am invited to a housewarming. Is it appropriate to give the hostess a gift of wearing apparel, or should the gift be something for her home? Or shouldn't a gift be given?

1. While it isn't strictly necessary for us to take a gift to a housewarming, it is a gracious and generous thing for us to do. And the gift should be something for the home, not a personal gift for the hostess.

Scarlet Tomato Gives Piquant Flavor to Sauces

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast over Station WAAB.

WHAT WOULD the housewife do without the flavoring of tomato? It would conceivably be hard to cook. Certainly it would be hard to put together inexpensive dishes with piquant and attractive flavor. [illegible] the scarlet tomato. [illegible] flavoring which are [illegible] as the spices added to [illegible] only seem to [illegible] the taste of the tomato.

Here are some unusual dishes with which to use tomato.

HAM WITH EGGS AND TOMATO

Fry six generous portions ham, then remove to platter to keep warm. [illegible] fat [illegible] add one large chopped onion and one large chopped green pepper and saute [illegible] brown. Add 2 cups tomatoes and one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper [illegible] Cook down [illegible] thick [illegible] add six [illegible] Serve with fried ham. Serves six.

RICE WITH VEGETABLES

Cut two slices bacon in small [illegible] Saute [illegible] mixed vegetables in the bacon fat for a few minutes, then add vegetable liquor and one cup tomatoes and season to taste with salt and pepper. Simmer a few minutes. Add two-thirds cup rice which has been boiled and drained and pour into a baking dish. Cover with one-fourth cup grated cheese and bake at [illegible]75 deg. F. for 25 minutes. Serves six.

TOMATO SAUCE FOR FISH OR MEAT

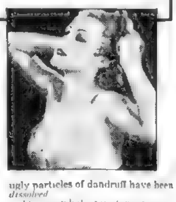

Stew one cup tomatoes with one slice onion for three or four minutes [illegible] press through sieve. Melt one and one-half tablespoons butter, add one and one-half tablespoons flour and stir smooth. Add tomato juice slowly, stirring until thick and smooth. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

HAIR COMBED THIS WAY STAYS ARRANGED!

It isn't any trouble, and there's hardly any cost

DANDERINE insures your hair for a penny a day...

After you've spent many minutes arranging your hair [illegible] arranged all [illegible] thing. Without another thought! A few drops of Danderine on the [illegible] you comb it.

A woman just can't believe the way this works until she has tried it.

Danderine isn't a sticky dressing, or even oily, yet it keeps every hair in place. It doesn't hurt the hair, or the color of the hair, and it doesn't leave any telltale odor. Its fresh fragrance is gone very soon after applying—but not that marvelous effect of freshness and cleanliness!

When you've [illegible] your hair, a little Danderine will keep it from going helter-skelter.

Just try this:

A dash of Danderine every day—every time you comb your hair—makes you sure of your hair all day long! To know it's clean, and looks clean. To know it will stay as you arranged it. And to know those ugly particles of dandruff have been dissolved.

This is what no [illegible] comb with a few drops of Danderine will do. And no amount of dry combing will ever do. Nearly all hair needs the help that Danderine gives it. Just a dash of Danderine morning and night makes a difference in the way any hair looks all the time! It does not affect the color.

With all the care you give your hair, it's a pity to omit this last touch that means so much. It's no trouble! Yet you can hardly believe anything so mild and pleasant as Danderine could bring such a change in the condition and appearance of your hair and scalp. Just try it. You can buy Danderine for thirty-five cents; larger sizes are 60c and $1.00.

REMEMBER:

Danderine isn't sticky.
It doesn't affect the color.
It definitely disposes of the worry over dandruff.
Its cost per day is next to nothing, it lasts so long.

"A prima donna of the "Met" who is just as well known for her beauty as her lack of musical training never fails to sing Depuis le jour on her every radio program—she sings it with adorable simplicity. After a rehearsal in a radio station, I asked the conductor, a fine musician how it went—" It was exactly Zwei Herzen im 3-4 Takt!

From South America through Mexico—

Comes La Argentine, most celebrated of dancers in the Spanish style to this country in late November — for a tourney of the States beginning in San Francisco.

We've always thought—that she represents the Spain of a Tourisme instead of the true Spain of the sunlit castles—that true Spanish costumes are more vivid than creations by Lanvin—that we should have a chance to see her in Da Falla's El Amor Brujo with settings, costumes and the disembodied contralto voice in that the composer intended in order to finally decide whether or not she is the great dancer that her reputation implies.

La Argentina

Poor ARGENTINA—

Greatest of all Spanish dancers, whom Ibanez mentioned in his Blood and Sand—who failed miserably for the lack of the false cliches too prominent in the work of the younger and less talented Argentina—the melodious half-voice explanations of her dances—the tragedy of the last minute change in theatres—the lights that failed—the curtain which wouldn't move—the GENIUS of her dance—the rapt audience—with BORI, BURTON HOLMES, the late BILLY LAHIFF, standing in the back!—staying until midnight—a tribute!

For G. M.—

Your interested and provocative letter appreciated. We feel that Dr. Koussevitsky entirely apart from his unique relation to Russian music not only as a first world performer, but as a producer of trends, and has the undeniable right to play Russian music if only for the fact that his interpretations are so truly RIGHT We are sure you have heard the mawky perversions of Chaikovski, from other conductors—poor Peter Ilyitch—he died of cholera—but his music has nearly expired from sentiment—which if Mme. Von Meck did nothing to inspire she certainly would have disliked—Boston heard the first performance of the first piano concerto —it now hears the greatest living exponent of music by Russians—appreciate, G. M—do not wonder!

Yes. If only some public spirited citizen would contribute to the People's Symphony Orchestra—Sevitsky's work deserves it—but Bostonian indifference is a difficult thing to understand—only last week we offered a $10,000 painting of a world famous royal figure to the sponsor of a series of concerts—for PUBLICITY purposes—but she wrote me she couldn't possibly think of a use for it—

Mudge's Triumph of Mind Over Matter; Foxx Raises Question ↕ Dean's Cash Reputation; Blocker Versus Runner Coast Blames Hollywood

By AUSTEN LAKE

THE FINEST TRIUMPHS of college sport are not those of wind and limb, performed on the green turf while thousands cheer.

They are the secret battles, fought in the privacy of a lad's mind, with no witnesses, like the spiritual heroism that made Glenn Cunningham of Kansas and Bill Bonthron of Princeton rise to world track records after boyhood burns that cruelly crippled their legs.

Austen Lake

There is Robert E. Mudge, the chunky halfback at Rhode Island State, a human bullet with a heart as big as a football. For Mudge has only one [illegible]

The right lobe was collapsed during childhood, at the age of seven, during a vital operation, and remains so now.

His is a story of rare, motherly understanding, so that Mrs. Mudge never allowed her growing son to regard himself as an invalid. She encouraged his interest in boisterous sport, paying out his energies [illegible] and watching [illegible] development anxiously [illegible] football for Bobby has been a matter of short bursts and long intervals of rest, never more than five minutes of a period. Yet at Westerly high he was leading schoolboy scorer of the state in 1930

Now at Rhode Island State he is a storm trooper who goes onto the field when his team is within striking distance to ram the line or dance step his way around the ends

And Frank Keaney, his coach, tells me that with a complete physical setup, his grit and skill would make him one of the nationally known stars

SOME DAY AND SOON, major league owners, who have their wealth invested in the bones and muscles of their players, [illegible] post-season barnstorming and halt their high-priced talent from playing around the hay-stack circuits for the sake of a little after-season pin money

Here is Jimmy Foxx, Connie Mack's $100,000 specimen, suffering from a head injury received at Winnipeg last week during an independent game. He complains of continual drowsiness, of wanting to sleep all the time, and it is feared that his brain may be permanently damaged

Thus, if there was any possibility of the Red Sox buying Foxx' contract for next season, it seems doubly improbable now. Messrs Collins and Yawkey are not likely to risk another 100 grand on damaged property, after their bitter experience with Grove's left arm

ON THE OTHER HAND, ball players demand the right to peddle their abilities after the season, stating that their athletic life, at best, is short and their earning powers limited

Babe Ru[illegible]t season price has ranged from $1000 to $2500 for a single game And the Dean brothers have gleaned $14,000 (hearsay) in their tour since the series. They snatched up $5000 for pitching two innings each for a Chicago semi-pro team before [illegible], as much as Paul drew from the Cardinals all last season

Sam Breadon, the Deans' owner, is happy to see his boys make these profits because it may modify their demands on him next season. The brothers will barnstorm until October 24, then start a three weeks' vaudeville tour at $3500 a week.

Preventative action, when it comes, will be from the league [illegible] The owners don't care to agitate their stars into higher [illegible] demands.

ASK A COLLEGE FOOTBALL COACH which he would choose, a good blocking back or a nimble, hula-hipped ball carrier who can weave and shuttle his way through a broken field. Every time he'll say, "Gimme the blocking back

Yet the press notices and crowd attention seldom credits trail breakers like Donald Jackson of Harvard or Jim Hobin of Holy Cross, who batter the way and take the bruises so the ball toter can scamper through. Still, it takes more knack and knowing to block neatly than to pivot and shimmy through the holes

No great ball carrier, even Red Grange, ever made a reputation without having an unsung comrade who blew tunnels for his passage. Grange's name still lives, but whoever hears of Earl Britten now.

"HOLLYWOOD," SAY THE WEST COAST critics, "has undermined the hardihood of our college football teams." Well, it has happened before in history. Luxury and soft living dimmed the glory of Athens and Rome

An energetic news snooper finds that the Hollywood studios employ more than 200 football stars from U. S. C., St. Mary's, Santa Clara, Stanford, U. of California, Loyola, Occidental and U. C. of Los Angeles during the summer months when the crop of college football pictures are in the making

College football stars draw $7.50 to $10 a day for super work in such pictures as RKO's "Gridiron Flash," in which 30 Southern California players took part. Metro-Goldwyn's "Backfield" and Paramount's "College Rhythm" employed a host of others to give the technical football setting.

Even the coaches find Hollywood a lucrative source, Howard Jones of U. S. C. and Ernie Nevers of Stanford drawing handsome incomes from studio work.

The Pacific Coast Conference, some time ago, set a limit of $10 a day for student-athletes, with the provision that their names should not appear in the titles.

THE FORDHAM-B. C. GAME turned up a "bug" in the football rules. Fordham gained five yards on a play, and somehow a Fordham end managed to get 30 yards down field and clip the B. C. safety man

The penalty, 15 yards from the spot of the foul, if enforced, would have given Fordham an additional gain of 10 yards. So the B. C. captain, wisely, declined. Yet the B. C. safety man might have been seriously injured without having any redress from the rules.

Crusaders Put on Finishing Touches for Charge at Crimson in Stadium

He's booming through the air, with the greatest of speed, is Eddie Britt of Holy Cross, as players show how the Purple plans to open the road for his flights on Saturday against Harvard in the Stadium. Britt is one of the best Purple backs.

MOSELY MAY RETURN FOR H. C. TILT

Holy Cross will break out a brand new set of uniforms at the Stadium on Saturday. Regal outfits of Northwestern purple will be th[illegible]

Holy Cross, however, will need more than new uniforms to convince Harvard it is the king of the Eastern grid

Realizing this, Doc Anderson is putting on the pressure again at Worcester

So though Gundlach will head the right charge on the offensive he probably will shift to Harvard's defensive left guard, as he did at times against Brown

Granting Holy Cross an edge at the tackles, whether the pair be Harvey and Lingua or Harvey and Moncewicz, the Crimson will hold its own at guard and has a slight edge at center

Dan Comfort has developed from mediocre fullback into a pivot and secondary defender worthy of the succession of Ben Tichnor and Warren Casey

A few doses of Comfort's vicious tackling is expected to take some of the speed and power out of Holy Cross' numerous ballcarriers just as he helped to ruin Brown's tricky offense.

Harvard will also have a slight edge at the wings, with Bobby Knapp making a sensational debut and Shaun Kelly his usual steady self Anderson has been dissatisfied with his ends for two years. He has attempted various conversions with Tom Kelly, and Brogan. Now the Purple has a pair of new wingmen in Bob Curley and Len Avery, while Bob Daughters, the sophomore, is relegated to a relief role.

Fred Moseley, hurt in the Brown game, was expected to don a uniform and loosen up today. If he is able to get into the final defensive brush of the week, with the freshmen staging the Holy Cross offense he will start Saturday.

Somerville Awards

Presentation of the [illegible] awards to the prize-winners in the Somerville City Series will be made at the dance of the Associated Baseball Clubs of Somerville at the high school gymnasium on Friday evening.

CAPT. CHAS. "BUZZY" HARVEY DR. EDDIE ANDERSON

That new Holy Cross hood gives Capt. Buzz Harvey of Holy Cross a very coy appearance as he chats with Coach Dr Anderson. There'll be nothing at all coy about Capt. Buzz when he faces Harvard on Saturday. He'll be all business, as the Crimson will discover when it shoots a play near his sector. Harvey is a candidate for All-America tackle ranking. Perry Assures Crawford He'll Remain an Amateur

By Associated Press

New York Oct 17—When John Bull trots out his Davis cup [illegible] for defense of the international tennis trophy next summer, Fred Perry still will be in England's lineup.

You can take that from no less an authority than Leighton Crawford, a member of the British cup selection committee, who returned recently from the Pacific coast where he talked with Perry

Crawford scouted stories and suggestions that Perry plans to turn professional this year

"I wouldn't say that Fred never will become a professional," Crawford said. "It is my opinion, however, that he won't join Vines and Tilden and the others for some time to come, if at all.

"Perry enjoys his popularity with his countrymen in England and I dare say he wouldn't be very popular if he turned professional

"He has England's lofty place in the tennis world in his heart and you can bet that he'll be playing on the Davis cup team next summer. It's funny how these rumors pop up from time to time."

Crawford went to the Pacific coast as manager of a team of three English girls—Betty Nuthall, Katherine Stammers and Freda James.

Aside from being impressed with what he considered the promise of superiority of California net players over the rest of the world, he visualizes in Donald Budge, red-haired coast youngster, the makings of another Fred Perry

"Budge has good and sound all-around stroke production and has a first class match temperament," Crawford said. "I think he is your best future prospect and has the makings of a world beater."

ST. MARY TEAM ARRIVES IN N. Y.

New York, Oct 17 (AP)—The St Mary's football team from Oakland, Calif., arrived here today for its intersectional game Saturday with the Fordham Rams at the Polo grounds.

A few minutes after their arrival the boys started out on a conducted sightseeing tour of Manhattan, while Edward "Slip" Madigan, the Gaels' coach, held court with the scribes in a hotel.

Later in the day the grid contingent will shift to the Westchester Country Club in Rye, the headquarters until the morning of the [illegible]

College Football More Commercial Than Ever--Walsh

By Davis J. Walsh,
International News Service Sports Editor

New York, Oct. 17—College football has gone more commercial than ever. It has weathered the Carnegie Foundation surveys, which turned out to be no more than so much pious blat, and again is playing the game right up to the final whistle—for [illegible] dollar

[illegible] per cent of the [illegible] to the player, [illegible] to the support [illegible] athletic programs that cannot [illegible] that cannot [illegible]

ON RIGHT ROAD AGAIN

But the turn came suddenly, with [illegible] the promised land. They seem [illegible]

Anyhow, one institution not far from here is understood to be paying its players a minimum of [illegible] a week. The stars, they say, get between $40 and $50. The stadium gets the rest.

[illegible] assail this particular institution. The condition, I believe is general.

Another institution, even closer, is not so blatant. It offers free board, free tuition and, if necessary, a job by which an honest youth can go [illegible] the motions of pander[illegible] conscience. That institution, I believe, has its stadium [illegible] paid for and needs its [illegible] receipts largely for the maintenance of other sports.

N. Y. U. WEARIED OF VIRTUE

I even hear that New York University, which seemingly abandoned prominence for sterling obscurity, has wearied of virtue—there is nothing so tiresome, unless it is vice—and is planning to clip the claws of the man who sponsored the noble experiment.

As for the Gates plan at Pennsylvania, one seldom encounters the word any more, except for some dark mutterings upon the part of graduates who feel that the two defeats in two games so far this season is a fitting commentary on the system

Besides, there have been [illegible] innuendoes in circulation, having to do with the surprisingly intrinsic strength of this football team, supposed to be the first to grace the glorious colors without the taint of premeditated selection.

There is no reason, of course, to confine these observations to one section. With notable exceptions, the condition prevails in the South, the Mid West, the Far West, and, in a comparative way, all through the country.

Some colleges merely want to have the best team in their [illegible] others are concerned with the more urgent matter [illegible] I [illegible] want to generalize too freely, but I suspect that big stadia must have big crowds or there will be big debts.

WALSH DRAWS LINE

There are, as I said, notable exceptions. There is one institution in the South, once very prominent in football, but now a consistent loser It is using students for its football team, instead of using the football team for its students

I hope it sticks to its program. In fact, I usually think everything is all right. But I draw the line at exploiting young boys between 18 and 21 and playing on their emotions, because some sap has gone on the cuff with too much concrete and too little collateral.

$10,000 for Mickey

Detroit, Oct. 17 (AP) Mickey Cochrane, who in his first year as a manager piloted the Detroit Tigers from the second division to within a game of winning the world's baseball championship, today was the possessor of a $10,000 bonus from the Detroit Baseball Company

The bonus was awarded Cochrane for his inspiring leadership as a manager and his ability during the season as a player. Cochrane whose contract has one more year to run is reliably reported to be receiving a $25,000 a year salary. He was purchased a year ago from the Philadelphia Athletics for $100,000 plus the contract of a reserve Tiger catcher.

EAGLES DELAY BALTIMORE TRIP ON ORMSBY'S REPORT

Mr. Boston Says:—

Patrick on Hockey Out to Get Winner Shore to Join Club

By Jack Conway

FRANK PATRICK, manager of the Bruins, promised Boston the best possible [illegible] that could be placed on the ice during a [illegible] at the Hotel Manger.

"I have just received word from Shore that he will report for practice in Quebec next week," said Patrick. "We have now come to terms with every player but Stewart. His differences with the club are minor ones, and will be ironed out by Art Ross in Quebec.

Mr. Boston

"I refused to allow any holdouts to come out for practice. I did not feel I should be asked to give instructions to a player who had not signed a contract.

"The Bruins began breaking up in 1930. The crash of last season was inevitable. When I took charge, it was necessary for me to start building a new team. Shore, Thompson, Barry and Clapper should act as the foundation for the new Bruins.

"We just sold Harry Oliver and Alex Smith to the Americans. I wish them success in their new jobs.

"In rebuilding the Bruins, I have obtained some standout stars of known ability, and have also acquired some youngsters.

"When I arrive in Quebec, I shall have 20 amateur players under my direction. I should be able to get one or two first class men of this lot. They may need some seasoning, and if they are not ready for the majors this coming season they will be by next season.

Color Also Needed

"WE HAVE secured some players who have exceptional color. A hockey club is expected to furnish entertainment as well as athletic competition, and colorful stars are needed.

"I have received every possible co-operation from Art Ross and Charley Adams. They have spent money freely in order to get me the players I have desired.

"I think we shall have a first class team on the ice during the coming season. We shall begin practicing in Quebec next week, and will later play a series of exhibition games with the Canadiens in different parts of Quebec.

"We play our first game in Toronto on November 8 and then move on to Detroit. By the time we come home for our opening game, I feel we shall have a first class club."

Patrick Knows Hockey

PATRICK MADE a decided impression with those persons who heard him speak. He knows hockey, and is frank in discussing it.

"I am glad to be manager of the Bruins," said Frank. "I first visited Boston when I played for McGill University against Harvard at the old Arena. I have made numerous trips here since, and like the city and its people. I have relatives who live here.

"I shall be frank in my dealings with the fans and the press. I shall always be trying to give Boston a winning team."

ART ROSS was also a speaker. He declared he would act as general manager of the Bruins, and that Patrick would [illegible] of the team on the ice.

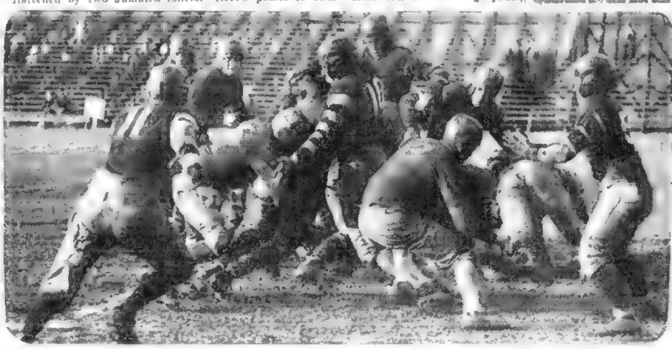

Ross spoke of his many years of [illegible] possible to secure those players desired by Patrick.

Bruin Cubs [illegible] at Quebec and will act as a farm for the Bruins.

Southie and Jamaica Teams Hit Victory Stride at Fens

A pass that failed for Jamaica Plain yesterday at Fenway came when Green of Jamaica tossed and O'Neil of Charlestown intercepted in the second period. O'Neil is shown flattened by two Jamaica toilers. Arrow points to ball. Jamaica won, 14 to 0, to maintain its fine record for the season. Jimmy Duffy is doing his usual excellent jobs of coaching at the school. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

There was no chance for Croatti of Roxbury Memorial, shown carrying ball, to gain on this rush against South Boston yesterday at Fenway Park. Southie jammed up the path, as it did much of the afternoon, and won, 7 to 6. The battle featured the twin bill at Fenway. Al Repetti of Southie made the touchdown and rushed the winning point after. Mazor, Memorial left end, recovered a fumble and scored a touchdown.

SCOUT DOUBTS B. C. CAN BEAT TERRORS

By Walter Kiley

The Eagles are worried.

Bill Ormsby, usually an estimable gentleman, is largely responsible.

Willyum is a man of diversified talents.

He is the able executive of his own roofing concern. The next moment he is the Boston College end coach. Again we see him gallivanting off to the inaccessible corners of the far places such as Reading, Pa., in a scouting capacity.

It is because of his proclivities in the latter department that his boss, Joe McKenney, has headaches.

The "Pepperbox" came back to Boston with such glowing accounts of the strength of the Western Maryland Green Terrors in their 49-0 slaughter of Albright last Saturday that the usually placid McKenney threw over all his plans to trek to Baltimore on tomorrow's noon train and shifted to Friday noon departure instead.

The postponement gives Boston College a full day of extra practice. It can utilize tomorrow to much better advantage here in Boston than it could in a Friday workout at Baltimore.

Ormsby is frankly skeptical of the Eagles' chances.

He claims Western Maryland has only one ambition, that to turn the tables on the team which it has met three times in as many years without the solace of a victory.

And he further states that Bill Shepherd is only one of several threats which the Terrors boast. He states that they employ the slippery Shepherd as a constant menace and then shoot 'Bomber' Schweiker crashing through the line or bombing through the air.

Harlow has drilled his men all fall in an elaborate aerial offensive, consisting of both forwards and laterals and the Eagles are in for it.

Johnny Blissman, senior end, a 1932 All-Maryland wingman, suffered a shoulder injury last Saturday and may be out for the season, and "Horse" Kaplan, one of those 182-pound tackles you dream about, is also slated for the sidelines.

Louis Lassahn, a sophomore, will fill in for Blissman and Barney Fleagle for Kaplan, both of the new appointees having shown well in the Villanova and Albright games.

The town of Westminster, the domicile of the Western Marylanders, is planning to move en masse on Baltimore. The entire student body and most of the townsfolk will trek the 30-odd miles to pull for their champions.

Medford Wins Again

The undefeated Medford High soccer team added Belmont to its list of victims, 5-2, in an interscholastic league game.

Schoolboy Hall of Fame

John Cunniff, 155 pounder, Boston College High guard, is a durable gridman who'll make things difficult for Cambridge Latin on Friday p. m. at Russell Field.

Cambridge Latin has weight and, despite a shaky start, is ready to do some winning. Lester Pitchford, yet halfback, is a Cantab best bet. Has speed, is shifty and smart.

Bill Griffin, 205, veteran B. C. H. tackle, is another of the Eagles pointing for a win over the Cantabs. Griffin is fast, powerful, and O K on attack or defense. Try to spill him!

Johnny Gomez at end stars for the Cantabs. He's a good all around performer, and can catch passes. He's one of the reasons for Cantab hopes of victory in coming games.

Steve Stankunas quarterbacks Cambridge Latin. His line hasn't been charging hot it has the ability and plans to get going by helping Steve outsmart B. C. High.

Art Noonan started the season as a sub wing for B. C. H., but has been showing varsity form lately. He may break in this week against the Cantabs. Good grid timber, this boy.

Medford Is Confident of Upsetting Everett

By Bill Connell

The Mystery Man of school football, Medford, is preparing the major upset of the season for his guest of Saturday next, unbeaten and untied Everett.

At least, Medford boys believe they're ready to spill Everett, and that confidence makes them all the more formidable for the latter. Which will enter the game a 5-to-4 favorite.

Fans expected to see Medford down New Bedford [illegible] starting the year. They weren't so sure about Chelsea, but Medford took that decision, too. Then Brockton was named favorite, only to be spilled.

The last game again reversed the odds, as Medford certainly was the choice to defeat Somerville, yet was fortunate to emerge with a scoreless tie.

Thus it appears that Everett would be better off against Medford if it were the underdog.

Quarter Bob Gurney, halfbacks Joe Stapleton, Santo Canana and Torbert Macdonald are about 1[illegible] each. Their teamwork is good, and rapidly improving.

Quarterbacks Walter Carew and Pizip Cervone; halfbacks Fran Doherty, Ted Watrous, and Frank Peregrino, ends Al Pearson, Carl Somy, Johnny Dwyer and Wes Cheilis; tackles Bert Kenty, Joe Manzo and Ed Burns; guards "Burch" Lorett, Leon Biscardi, Phil Bruno and Will Dellarusso; centers Al Panzica, Joe Ippolito and John O'Connell round out the active varsity group.

There are a few more than 40 on the varsity squad handled by Head Coach Brooks and Dick Phelan. Tommy O'Connor guides the soph squad of some 35 boys and acts as chief scout.

Manager Gene McGillicuddy and Andy Garrity, chief assistant, are efficient members of the personnel.

The entire camp has the atmosphere of victory. The boys and their coaches know no team can beat them by much. Since no team has a big margin on them, they feel they can and may as well down all comers.

That spirit has carried them thus far without a loss. It may get them past Everett safely, in which case it's hard to see who'd beat Medford to keep it from cutting in on the title cake.

Tomorrow: Malden Players and Prospects.

"DIZZY" DEAN VOTED MOST VALUABLE

By Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 17—And still they call him "Dizzy."

He's the idol of St. Louis, the talk of the baseball world.

He's making thousands of dollars for himself, cashing in on his fame.

And he's having a lot of fun doing it all.

He was christened Jerome Herman Dean. They called him Jerome when he was picking cotton for less than a dollar a day, but when he began to skyrocket across the baseball horizon they started calling him "Dizzy."

A few million hard working people wouldn't mind being called "Dizzy" if they could duplicate some of his deeds or pocket half of his cash.

The "most valuable player" award of the National League is the latest honor to fall to the [illegible] of the championship St. Louis Cardinals. The dizzy one came within two points of a perfect score in the selection by a committee of eight representing the Baseball Writers Association of America, which votes the honorary award each year, getting 78 votes out of a possible 80, his margin was 28 points over Paul Waner, Pittsburgh outfielder who finished second with 50 points. [illegible] New York, [illegible] 33.

Some of Dizzy's achievements over the 1934 campaign:

Won 30 games and lost 7 in the regular season, won two World Series games, led the National league in strikeouts for the third [illegible] 195 [illegible] innings, participated in 51 Cardinal games, either as pitcher, pinch batter, or base runner, batted .246 and [illegible]

Return of Clark, Nairne Big Boost to Green

By Dick Montgomery

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 17—Dartmouth approaches its intersectional contest with University of Virginia, the prelude to the more strenuous contests against Harvard, Yale, Cornell and Princeton, in much better physical condition than at any time so far this season.

Only Capt. Jack Hill, former [illegible] athlete and ace triple-threat halfback, and Anthony Geniawicz, former all-America scholastic football and track star at Lynn English High School, are now disabled with injuries.

Hill has yet to see action this season, being benched with a leg injury received while playing baseball this summer, while Geniawicz injured a knee during the Maine game last Saturday.

The biggest reinforcement to the Big Green ranks is the return of Bill Clark, veteran halfback, and Frank (Pop) Nairne, outstanding halfback prospect who was ineligible last fall after starring on his freshman team two years ago.

Both suffered early season injuries and were making their first game appearance last Saturday.

ERION BACK AT TACKLE

The value of the two men to Head Coach Earl Blaik is readily attested by their action soon after their entrance in Saturday's game.

In three successive plays the pair carried the ball 50 yards to Maine's 10-yard stripe where a bad pass from center ended the march.

Another welcome re-inforcement is at the tackle posts where Don Erion, rangy six-foot-three giant, and Dave Camerer, huge sophomore, are again physically fit for action.

Erion, veteran of last season's campaign and a mainstay although but a sophomore at that time, has yet to appear in a game this season because of an injury more than a month ago.

Camerer suffered an injury in the Norwich game, after playing impressively.

FOES STRONG IN AIR

[illegible] the present regulars a battle for the posts. Gordon Bennett and Donald Otis, sophomores, have drawn the call during their absence, but Erion is almost certain of ousting one of the pair from the first-string berth.

Virginia comes to Hanover with the reputation of considerable strength, being a threat in the aerial department, and Blaik may be forced to use his more deceptive plays to win.

JACK SHARKEY HAS GAY TIME AS REFEREE

Jack Sharkey packed his duffle today for a hunting trip in New Brunswick after refereeing one of the wildest mat battles in history. And nobody won!

Participants were Bull Curry, Tony Papolino, Ted Germaine and Cannonball Grange. A crowd of 6000 looked on.

Grange won the first fall by throwing Curry with a top body press in 20.49. Papolino then dropped Curry with a top body press in 22.21, and Germaine's top body press flattened Grange in 13.49.

Inasmuch as no contestant could claim two falls, the match was declared a draw.

Sharkey, fifth man in the ring, was fifth man in the battling most of the time, and had to use his noted left hook to extricate himself on several occasions. And didn't the merry crowd howl!

In the semifinal, Melsheka was awarded the bout in 17.10 when Gil LaCrosse was disqualified for fouling the referee.

Holy Cross Will Err -:- If It Shoots Works -:- Against Harvard

By Bill Grimes

Up on Mt. St. James, Coach Eddie Anderson is driving his Crusaders for Saturday's tilt with Harvard in the Stadium . . . On [illegible] of the Charles, Coach Eddie Casey is making [illegible] preparation for Holy Cross . . . Holy Cross has a veteran eleven . . . One which has been through at least one Harvard game . . . Coach Anderson can afford to key up such an aggregation . . . On the other hand, the wearers of the crimson for the most part have yet to receive their first taste of real varsity competition . . . To concentrate on Holy Cross might ruin whatever chance Harvard has of beating Yale, which is always the real objective game for the Crimson . . . Regardless of what might happen in the Stadium Saturday, Harvard will take the Holy Cross game in stride . . . And, it will be a serious error on the part of the Worcester collegians if they tear after the Crimson [illegible]

Eddie Casey

Although it has never displayed any fondness for defeats by so-called small colleges, Harvard can take it . . . However, it is not in the books for a small college, which has the good fortune to be represented by one of the outstanding elevens in the East, to shoot the works against one of the Big Three . . . And it is especially true if the big fellow has only two games under his belt . . . And his coaches are trying to whip an inexperienced squad into some kind of a presentable unit . . .

Coach Joe McKenney is pressing his Eagles for Western Maryland . . . Although he didn't relish the Fordham victory, McKenney is perfectly satisfied with the showing made by his Boston College squad on the holiday . . . He has complimented every player on his performance against the Rams . . . The Eagles lost to Fordham, but gained much experience and confidence, which will be used to advantage before the close of the season . . . The Eagles were not ready for Fordham, but they will be one of the best balanced elevens Joe McKenney has ever developed by the time of the Holy Cross game.

Incidentally, the high scholastic requirements, the improved personnel and the McKenney type of football are making thousands of friends for Boston College . . . In fact, within a few years, Boston College will come into its own and be in a position to improve its schedule by contacting elevens fostering scholastic requirements and personnel of their own standards . . . One of the first athletic directors to lend a helping hand to B. C. was Bill Cowell, of the University of New Hampshire . . . And, you can put it right on the line that if the Eagles did not measure up to requirements, no inducement could have tempted Bill Cowell to enter a home and home agreement with John P. Curley.

I'd like to see Boston College and Brown tie up . . . Neither of these institutions is doing any proselyting . . . the material is about equal . . . and Tuss McLaughry and McKenney are not only the ranking coaches in this section but two of the most popular . . . Right now, McKenney is thinking more of what Captain Bill Shepherd, of Western Maryland, is liable to do to his Eagles than improving his schedule . . . Shepherd did not have MUCH of a day against Albright . . . He was able to score only five touchdowns . . . He must have been loafing.

If the weather man turns on another blizzard next Saturday, it will be just too bad for the University of Virginia . . . The Cavaliers will probably freeze as stiff as boots even if they tackle the Big Green on what the natives of Hanover would term a balmy autumn afternoon . . . Villanova lost much of its thunder when Marty Brill's LaSalle College knocked them off . . . Harry Stuhldreher was tendered a large contract to put Villanova on the football map, not to be taken over the jumps by LaSalle.

If Mike Layden and Fred Carideo develop as did their brothers, it will be "oke" with Notre Dame . . . Eugene Wogan, Jr., son of "Skip," golf professional and architect, is playing left guard for Manchester High . . . Chick Meehan blames Manhattan's defeat by Georgetown on an over abundance of sophomores, who were not experienced enough to cope with Jack Haggerty's Hilltoppers . . . By the way, Haggerty paid Tony Plansky a fine tribute on the air when he stated that in his opinion Boston's greatest all-around athlete would have excelled Jim Thorpe had he put his mind on football.

Tony Plansky

Generally there is little rough stuff in evidence during pro games, but the opposite will be true when the Redskins and Philadelphia Eagles clash next Sunday at Fenway Park.

PRICES MIXED NEAR QUIET FINISH

New York, Oct. 17—Heaviness in the liquor and silver shares halted an advance in the stock market today and turned the list somewhat irregular.

Early strength had carried the list up from fractions to 2 points before the weakness in National Distillers disturbed the market.

The latter dropped more than a point apparently on the unwillingnes of traders to remain with the stock pending the announcement of the new financig.

SILVER PRICES

Lower silver prices in London had an adverse influence on the silver shares.

United States Steel was an early strong spot but lost most of its gain in the post-noon dealings. Bethlehem gave a similar performance.

Chrysler set the pace for the motor shares rising above 37 for a gain of nearly a point only to fall back later.

Oils continued to mark time holding around their previous closing levels despite the reports of spreading gasoline price wars.

International Harvester was the outstanding issue in the farm implements advancing 2 points to a new high for the movement.

Commodity markets were mixed with cotton steady, while grains dipped.

AWAITS ADDRESS

Rails were evidently helped by moderately favorable carloadings reports for western carriers, and the statement of President Roosevelt at his mid-week press conference that the matter of RFC loans to needy carriers was chiefly a question of providing satisfactory collateral.

Financial circles are awaiting with keen interest the President's address to the American Bankers' Association convention next week, and has gained the impression, from the number of bankers and financial leaders who have called at the White House recently, that an effort is being made to reassure capital, to promote recovery.

The reaction in silver developed first in the London market, which was accepted here as indicating that the U. S. Treasury was not pursuing its foreign buying with vigor. On the whole, this was reassuring to "hard money" quarters.

A theory has developed among some Wall Street foreign exchange authorities that the silver buying program is being used as a threat to the British equalization fund, to prevent a too rapid decline in the pound sterling. The recent sag in sterling is believed by some authorities to have been a factor in the reaction in sensitive commodity prices here.

New England Tel Nets $4.49 a Share

New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. reports for nine months after all charges of $5,996,849, equal after al charges of $5,996,849, equal to $4.49 a share on 1,333,458 shares of stock. This compares with net equal to $4.13 a share in the same nine months of 1933. Dividend payments were $4.50 a share in each nine-month period.

Indicated net earings for the third quartr of 1934 were equivalent to $1.41 a share compared with $1.56 a share in the third quarter of 1933.

Exchange Seat Sells for $90,000

New York, Oct. 17 (INS)—The value of stock exchange memberships rose $5,000 today, reflecting the recent upturn in security prices and the improvement in trading volume which accompanied the advance.

Sale of a seat was announced at $90,000 compared with the last previous transaction at $85,000.

Atlantic Coast Line Gives Report

Atlantic Coast Line Railroad reports for eight months ended August 31, 1934, surplus of $687,043 after taxes and charges, equal, after dividend requirements on the 5 per cent preferred, to 83 cents a share on 823,427 shares of common, against deficit of $817,154 in first eight months of 1933.

Stock Market Time Table

10-11 — Profit-taking checked opening strength. Activity diminished near the close of the hour. Chemicals were strong. Rails were firm. Alcohols unsteady. Soft spots appeared in the metals. Turnover amounted to 230,000 shares.

11-12—Weakness in alcohols had an unsettling influence in the second hour. Merchandisers displayed quiet strength. Trading was dull with sales running 340,000 shares.

12-1—Trading was quiet in the third hour. Tobaccos were strong. Chemicals held gains. Metals were easy. Trend was mixed. Sales were 420,000 shares.

In order to facilitate the computation of margins under the regulations of the Security Exchange Act, the Boston Evening American now carries the low since July 1, 1933, instead of the low for the year. The Securities Exchange Act provides that until July 1, 1936, the lowest price at which a security has sold since July 1, 1933, shall be considered as the lowest market price in the preceding 36 months. After July 1, 1936, the Act provides that the lowest price in the preceding 36 months will form the basis for margin computation.

Addressograph Sales Gains Continue

Analysis Prepared by the Fitch Investors' Service

Continuing the favorable showing of the first quarter, earnings of 26 cents per common share were reported for the second quarter of 1934, bringing earnings for the first half to 41 cents. In the comparable quarter of last year, a deficit was incurred.

Eales, both domestic and foreign, continue to make satisfactory gains, with shipments for the first 8 months of 1934 up 47.9 per cent over the comparable 1933 period. Sales for August, 1934, were 27.6 per cent above August a year ago, and 9.5 per cent over July of this year. Foreign sales in the first eight months set a new high record for the company, being over 4 per cent ahead of the previous peak, attained in 1930. Improved business condition should also have allowed better collection of receivables, and reduction in $1,600,000 bank loans outstanding at the end of 1933.

Increased sales efforts, greater commercial and sales activities on the part of its customers and aggressive exploitation of foreign markets all aided in the favorable showing. While current business sentiment is hardly conducive to greatly increased sales, company should continue to make a relatively favorable showing.

SOUND COMPETITIVE POSITION

Long-term outlook is good. Patent and competitive positions are sound. Replacement and repair demand, as well as steady call for supplies used in conjunction with its devices form a backlog of substantial size. Aggressive merchandising methods and development of new products such as its "Dry-lith" and "Multilith" devices, open up new sources of revenue. Substantial undeveloped foreign business adds to outlook for increased longer-term profits.

EXTENSIVE SALES ORGANIZATION

Company, through subsidiaries, is the dominating unit engaged in the manufacture and distribution of patented office equipment and supplies for same, used primarily for the mechanical addressing of letters, printing, duplicating typewritten matter, and similar specialized office routine work that can be handled economically by these machines. Trade-marked names include Addressograph, Multigraph, Graphotype and Dupligraph. Sales offices and service stations are maintained in practically all the large cities of the United States and in important cities throughout the world.

Capitalization is comprised of funded debt, $8580; common (no par), 746,313 shares. (Also 13,900 shares in treasury.)

MISS LINNEHAN WINS KIDNAPING CONTEST

Among the thousands of letters received in the Lindbergh Kidnaping Contest the reply of Miss Frances Linnehan of 118 Hampshire street, Cambridge, today, was decreed the best by the consensus of the judges and was awarded the first prize of $10.

A close runner-up was Mrs. J. E. Dickman of 1140 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, who will receive the second prize of $5.

The following will receive awards of $1 each: Miss Betty Quigley of 44 Oldham street, Providence, Rhode Island; Mrs. Madeleine Hibbs 33 Vernal street, Everett; Mrs. J. Sutherland, 63 Hawthorne street, Lowell; Mrs. Mabel Robertson, 37 Bartlett street, Somerville; Mrs. R. N. Dillon, 67 Nahant street, Lynn; Miss Edith Pransky, 49 W. Selden street, Mattapan; Mrs. Helen Hearn 88 Francis street, Roxbury; Mrs. Jane Liberto, 2966 Washington street, Roxbury; Mrs. Robert Bacon, 17 Boylston street, Jamaica Plain; and Mrs. Henry Sibley, Tilton, New Hampshire.

WOULD REVEAL EVIDENCE

The answer of the winning contestant as to what she would do were she the wife of a man alleged to be a kidnaper, murderer and extortionist, follows:

Dear Editor:

"If I were the wife of a kidnaper, and overwhelming evidence indicated he was guilty of the ruthless murder of a little child, I should without hesitation reveal every scrap of evidence which I thought might have a bearing on the case.

"If in addition my husband demanded and collected money from the grief stricken parents on the promise that he would return the child, I should be overcome by horror.

"The very thought that the one whom I thought to be perfect could be so inhuman and unnatural as to perpetrate such a dastardly crime would destroy every shred of affection which I might previously have felt for him. I would feel it to be my moral duty to denounce him and renounce him forever.

CONSCIENCE AS GUIDE

"Purely as a matter of conscience and to absolve myself from any suspicion that I was an accomplice in the crime I would unhesitatingly testify against him.

"The problem would be somewhat more complicated if I had children. I would consider that their best interests could not possibly be forwarded by an attempt to whitewash a crime of which I believed their father to be guilty.

"I would feel equally guilty were I to save him from the just penalty of his crime, and if my children realized that I not only condoned the crime of their father, but also helped him to escape from the clutches of the law, they would be perfectly justified in thinking that I was remiss in my duty as a mother.

"I could not be accused of lack of loyalty to my husband because I renounced him as it was his own act which was responsible for my renunciation. His crime made all social compacts which he had made in the past, null and void.

LOYALTY DEFINED

"Loyalty means praiseworthy adherence to a person, cause or ideal, which, in itself, we feel to be worthy of such moral support. It can not possibly apply to an alliance of good and evil.

"My peace of mind and the future welfare of my children would undoubtedly be promoted by doing all in my power to tell the whole truth about my husband regardless of the punishment which he might undergo because of my disclosures."

"Knowing my husband to be a heartless monster and a murderer, I should never want to see him again."

FULLER'S TAX ADJUSTED

Although former Governor Alvan T. Fuller will have to pay the United States government some amount in addition to the income tax he paid in 1930, it won't be the $11,190.75 that the government originally claimed.

The discrepancy in his tax return was due to a complicated system of bookkeeping that derived from a split up of the stock of the Packard Motor company five for one, of which Fuller held 25,000 shares.

Fuller appealed the deficiency assessment, and the United States Board of Tax Appeals has agreed to an adjustment. The exact amount of the deficiency finally set by the board has not yet been determined.

Policewoman Gets Official Praise

The second commendation ever given a policewoman in Boston fell to the lot of Mrs. Margaret M. McHugh, when Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman gave official praise to her and to Inspector James H. Egan and Detective James F. McDevitt, for their work in the capture and conviction of Edward R. Domin, the "NRA" kid.

Inn addition, Mrs. McHugh was given a three-day vacation and Egan and McDevitt one week.

'Every Woman Knows'—Plenty

Letters Stagger Postman as Girls Tell All

Helen Hayes Picture Contest Starts Flood of Entries

The girls have it! That is they have the chance of telling what they think about the men. And if you don't think they're availing themselves of this opportunity offered by the Boston Evening American, you should interview the postman whose job is to deliver the entries.

Whether it is because the girls have a little grievance against the supposedly stronger sex or whether they want part of the $25 in cash which is being offered as prizes to winners, the contest has certainly made a decided hit with the girls.

And it all come about because Helen Hayes' latest picture, "What Every Woman Knows," which opens at Loew's State Theater on Friday, has her cast in the role of a young lady who had to know about men. Miss Hayes had her special philosophy on men, but adjusted herself to her particular man.

Now, what is your knowledge of them? Do they talk too much? Are they prone to be too forward?

The Boston Evening American is awarding the prizes as follows: First prize, $10; second and third, $5; fourth and fifth, $2.50; and the next 25 next best will be sent courtesy tickets to see Helen Hayes in Sir James Barrie's famous romance, "What Every Woman Knows," at Loew's State theater.

BRIAN AHERNE HELEN HAYES

Knowledge of What Every Woman Knows stood Helen Hayes in good stead as the heroine of the Barrie Play by that name, opening Friday at Loew's State Theater. She plays opposite Brian Aherne.

CAROL ARRIVES IN BELGRADE

By Universal Service

Belgrade, Oct. 17—While all Yugoslavia paid honors to the slain King Alexander, King Carol of Rumania, brother-in-law of the martyred monarch, arrived from Bucharest to attend the state funeral tomorrow.

Carol, who came to Belgrade against the advice of his counsellors who feared a possible attack by terrorists groups, was met by Prince Paul, head of the regency, by dowager Queen Marie of Rumania, his mother, and other members of the bereaved family.

The government, meanwhile, decided to postpone until after the obsequies the dispatch of a sharp note to Hungary protesting against the alleged harboring of revolutionary agitators in that country.

The Bulgarian legation announced that King Boris will attend the funeral.

Corn-Hog Vote by Farmers

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Farmers held their corn-hog vote in Chicago and will try it another year.

The triple A program worked out great for them. The hogs ate the corn and shared some with the farmers. The farmers ate the hogs and shared some with us.

The little pig who stayed home was as valuable as the little pig who went to market. The corn that was plowed under was insured along with the barn that was struck by lightning.

If you decided to dig a well and then decided not to you were entitled to time lost while thinking. Next year there will be money in the poultry business.

Your hens will not have to lay an egg provided that they cackle loud and long. All the government requires is circumstantial evidence.

DAUGHTERS OF VENUS By Robert Terry Shannon

CHAPTER XXVI

"We really must be going," he said, echoing Juliet. "You need rest."

"Nonsense, you two. I'm tougher than the both of you! It's something else beside business that's in your heads."

An uncomfortable silence settled in the perfumed room.

The witch-like little figure, propped up in its mountain of cushions, gave them both a wordless, jeering smile. It was an attitude of mind emanating from Madame Hubert that vaguely embarrassed Juliet.

"For my part, I'm going straight home and to bed," said O'Hara quickly.

"How pious you've become!" said Madame Hubert mockingly. "Such a beautiful yuong man too. After a hard business day and your little visit here, you still have the whole night before you—for love. Too bad you aren't a Frenchman—they know how to love."

O'Hara grinned. "Aren't you developing some new ideas, Madame?"

"Rubbish! I've always had more understanding in my little finger than you have in your whole magnificent body, O'Hara. The trouble with me is that I was never attractive. Besides, I was too busy making money."

"AN ANTISEPTIC BRAIN"

Her eyes, bright as a wolf's, rolled toward Juliet.

"If I were in your shoes, my dear, I'd make him take me dancing at the Ambassador tonight."

"I thought you didn't want me going around with men from the Institute," said Juliet, her interest jaded in this conversation.

"That was many yesterdays ago," Madame Hubert answered. "I've had a long time to think about life —and what I've missed. Take my advice, my dear, and don't let it pass you by. Is Von Guerdon still pursuing?"

"He's too busy to have funny ideas," replied Juliet.

"Good! There's no romance in Von Guerdon anyway. He has an antiseptic brain. If I were you, I wouldn't hesitate a minute. Take O'Hara, he's all temperament. Tell me, has O'Hara ever kissed you yet?"

The dry, persistent voice was plucking discordantly on Juliet's mind. The Mandarin robe was open a little, disclosing the hollows in the Madame's neck; there were shadows on her face, giving it an expression of hawkish cruelty.

"Does it matter?" Juliet asked, definitely rising to leave.

Without looking at O'Hara, she knew that he was uncomfortable, too. If, in truth, they had never been in each other's arms, the question would not have struck home so sharpply.

"It's no good denying it," said Madame Hubert. "I can tell by O'Hara's face. He's flushing."

"Madame, you are an evil-minded old devil," O'Hara said with facetious severity, which was the best defense. "I swear I believe you spend your time hatching up sinful ideas about your lofty-minded employes. You were probably run out of France for corrupting the morals of Paris. Juliet, here, belongs to the younger generation and they know as little of sin as they do of gin. I'm going to get her out of this house before you put an indelible scar on her childish mind."

TALK WITH O'HARA

When they left, Madame Hubert was cackling with the kind of laughter that gave Juliet a prickling sensation at the roots of her hair.

Speeding home in O'Hara's roadster she ran the window down and let the fresh night air blow keenly across her face.

Day by day she had been seeing a great deal of O'Hara and was finding herself more and more at ease in his presence, but the remembrance of this, and other evenings at Madame Hubert's stuck like a burr in her mind.

For the first time, she decided to discuss it with O'Hara.

"Oh, don't pay any attention to her," he advised. "What if her conversation does get a little raw? After all, Juliet, we're not exactly lilies ourselves."

"I know—but it rubs me the wrong way," said Juliet. "Why does she talk that way?"

"For her own amusement. She's led a pretty hard life and she doesn't have much left except what's in her head. I mean, if we understood people better we might pity them more. No, what you resent is the truth in what she said."

"The truth?"

"Yes, the truth. She was probably right. Here we are, perfectly free and missing all the joy of being in love. You ought to realize, Juliet, that we're both leading darn lonely lives. And we might be in Paradise. That's the worst of it. It's right in our reach and we content ourselves with just the empty husks of life. Cowardly, isn't it?"

When O'Hara let Juliet out in front of her apartment house, they shook hands before parting. She could tell by his eyes that passion lay just beneath the surface, that he wanted to kiss her.

Poor chap! If love and passion were beautiful, then the opposite—frustration—must be ugly and painful. But kindness was the only balm Juliet had available.

"Good-night, O'Hara—you're a nice person and I like you lots and lots and lots."

FEELS LIKE CHEAT

But she felt like a cheat when she said it.

The lights in the lobby had been dimmed when Juliet entered, and she scarcely noticed the man sitting on a settee in the shadow. He rose and she saw it was Von Guerdon.

What under the sun, she wondered, did he mean by calling at this late hour?

Instinctively, she hoped it had something to do with an emergency at the Institute. She was tired and in no mood to fend off any more masculine emotions.

"Forgive me for coming around," Von Guerdon said, with the habitual inclination of his body that suggested a bow. "I was restless and I thought I might see you for a few moments."

She smiled wanly. "I'm so tired and so sorry," she said softly.

"I know you're under a strain," he said in a soothing voice. "My car's outside. Would you like to drive with me for a half hour? It will refresh you."

What insistent creatures, men, thought Juliet. "But it's so late."

"Then let me come up to your apartment and sit quietly with you for a while," he proposed. "I've been working so long and so hard I need a little consolation. Am I asking too much?"

She saw him through her weary eyes as a charming man, undeniably attractive, even though fatigue had given him haggard lines she had never noticed before.

There was a grace about his tall, slender figure that suited some obscure aesthetic sensibility. If there had ever been any arrogance about him, it was not perceptible now. His whole attitude was tired.

A small mysterious ache turned over in her heart.

"Come on up," she said. "We'll have a cup of hot tea and then you must go."

In her living room she turned on the light on one low lamp and the mellow illumination softened all the angles and slants of the modern furnishings. One of the long windows was open and she closed it.

"WHERE'S KATIE?"

"Let me have your coat—and sit down," she said. "I'll fix the tea right away. Would you like some little cakes?"

"No, thanks. Just the tea. Let me help you."

"Don't bother."

But he followed her to the glistening kitchen, leaned watchfully against the doorway while she put on the kettle.

"Where's Katie?"

"Asleep. I just closed the door of her room."

Von Guerdon lit a cigarette and exhaled slowly.

"I wonder if you haven't made a mistake about that girl," he said. "Your motive is splendid, of course, but is she the sort you ought to have in your home?"

"She's better off here than she'd be in the streets," Juliet told him succinctly.

"I'm not thinking of her—I'm thinking of you."

"Oh, I'm not afraid of getting damaged. And I really need a sort of maid. Poor little devil, she never had kindness in her life."

"Well, I certainly hope you civilize her," Von Guerdon said. "She's not really bad. Remarkable how fond she is of O'Hara, isn't it?"

"That's because he was kind to her. I'm going to have him up some time and let her visit with him. She thinks he's a sort of a god. If he wanted her to be educated I think she'd study her head off."

"That's true," said Von Guerdon, and then he added casually as though he were joking. "And how is my rival getting along? I scarcely see you at all these days, but you seem to spend a lot of time with him."

Having asked the question that was uppermost in his mind, he waited in silence for his answer. Juliet, busy with the tea things, was silent until they were back in the living room and comfortably settled with their steaming cups.

"O'Hara? He's handling the new business beautifully but—I don't know—"

TEA WARMS JULIET

"What is it you don't know?" asked Von Guerdon penetratingly.

The tea warmed Juliet, stimulated her into a restful sense of confidence. The unpleasant thought —that burr of suggestion planted by Madame Hubert, still troubled her.

chair and smiled at her.

"My dear girl," he said consolingly, "don't let these things fray your nerves. You say Madame Hubert seeks constantly to throw you into O'Hara's company. She suggests you go dancing and that you have—in fact—a love affair, and it worries you. You feel the old woman is subtly trying to promote a romance."

"It certainly looks that way," Juliet said wearily.

Von Guerdon silently put his cup and saucer upon the low table beside his chair and stood up.

"You are quite wrong, my dear. I'm going to tell you a shocking thing. Madame Hubert is in love with O'Hara herself!"

The statement struck Juliet like a breach of good taste. "How ridiculous!" she said with a shudder.

"Nevertheless, it is quite true," Von Guerdon assured her calmly. "It is a case of vicarious affection. She imagines you in his arms and then transfers herself into your image. Any psychiatrist could explain it easily."

"It's too ugly to think about," said Juliet.

"In my profession," Von Guerdon assured her, "I cannot consider any facet. But to this extent I agree—it is neither a high nor beautiful manifestation of love. It's a curious thing how repressions run through underground channels until you find an outlet. I'm going to tell you something confidentially, Madame Hubert has consulted me about a complete rejuvenation for herself. I'm afraid we've another Katie Schmidt on our hands."

A pang of regret stabbed Juliet.

COLDS GO THRU 3 STAGES!

The first is the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours. The second, the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days. The third, the Mucous Secretion Stage. The time to stop a cold is in the first stage. This, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine does. It does not merely suppress the cold, but drives it completely out of your system. 30¢ and 50¢ at all druggists.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor —you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should try Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They help overcome constipation. Try them and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes sold yearly. 15c, 30c, 60c.

SHEPARD SALE CELEBRATES

Marking their 69th anniversary, The Shepard Stores inaugurate tomorrow their annual sale, known as John Shepard Days, with the sale continuing through three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

John Shepard Days commemorate an unusual fact in the history of American department stores, as all through the 69 years the Shepard Stores have been in existence there has been a John Shepard at the head of the firm, or as president of the corporation.

In 1865, the Shepard Stores were founded by John Shepard, Sr., and they have been owned, directed and managed by John Shepard, Jr., since 1910. Since 1928, John Shepard, 3d, has been president.

John Shepard Jr. John Shepard, 3d

"In carrying out the traditions of this business," John Shepard, Jr., said today, "all the items offered in the John Shepard sale will be of first quality, dependable merchandise, seasonable in character and correct as to fashion.

"It is an event that is planned to move a great deal of merchandise at very low prices, helping everybody both ways; first, in the extra amount of employment thus generated; and second, in great savings to the consuming public."

Make Booing the Flag Dangerous Action

HOW long must patriotic Americans endure the misconduct of Communist aliens, agitators illegally in our midst?

The Constitution was designed to preserve free speech, but NOT to protect those who attack our government.

The recent Columbus Day holiday served to bring out anew the fact that a lot of undesirable aliens have "discovered" America.

An incident typical of the trouble-making foreign propagandist strain was the flag booing at Columbus Circle, New York, where Governor Lehman of New York spoke.

It is just such disgraceful occurrences, together with the persistent efforts of Communists and similar malcontents to foment industrial strife and disorders, that are rapidly wearing down the patience of the American people.

Colonel James A. Moss, of the United States Flag Association, is one hundred per cent right in demanding that the Departments of Justice and Labor institute AT ONCE a concerted drive to rid the country of these rabble-rousers and inciters of disloyalty, who arrive here illegally and are permitted by lax law enforcement to remain unlawfully.

Other nations, as we have said repeatedly, do not tolerate "revolutionary" tactics and preachments by foreign interlopers. Undesirable aliens are either sifted out and excluded at the borders or, if they happen to sneak by, are very quickly detected and deported.

The Federal Government, in duty to its own loyal citizenship, must neglect this problem no longer. As Colonel Moss says:

"Kick the flag booers out of this nation—bounce them back to their own countries so fast they won't know what hit them!"

Checks and Balances

One of the oldest features of the government of this Commonwealth is the Executive Council—and there are those who feel that it is also one of the most useless and annoying.

It had its origin in the Colonial Board of Assistants, whose function it was to check the powers of the Governors. Today we still believe in government by checks and balances. It is the only way to make a Democracy work.

But the function of the Assistants has been taken over by the General Court, and the Executive Council remains largely as a nuisance. If its members are of the same party as the Governor, they are only a rubber stamp for his actions.

If they belong to the opposition party, they are just a convenient device for throwing a monkey-wrench into the State's business. Nothing on Beacon Hill was quite so disgusting as the Council's stubborn and usually unreasonable opposition to Governor Ely.

Former Mayor Curley has pledged himself to do everything in his power to have the Council abolished. He sees no reason why a Governor should be forced to haggle with it. Many will agree with him.

Surgeons in Boston

Boston is again made conscious of the fact that it is one of the world's greatest medical centers by the presence of the five-day Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons.

The Congress brings 5000 of the most famous surgeons in the world to the medical schools and some 30 hospitals of this city to learn of the latest advances in their profession. A few of them will talk. Most of them will watch and listen.

From the viewpoint of the layman, the most important event on the program is the Community Health meeting this evening.

Following their established custom "and in recognition of the obligation to the public to provide authoritative information on modern surgery, better hospitals and the prevention of disease," the surgeons have hired the Boston Arena, with its seating capacity of 10,000, for this important public meeting.

Every person owes it to himself, and those dependent on him, to keep in stride with the advances of modern medicine. There is no better way of doing it than by attending this meeting.

James J. Phelan

By the death of James J. Phelan Boston loses a citizen of high standing.

Born in humble circumstances, he rose to take a foremost place in the councils of finance and industry.

Despite the honors heaped on him by church and state alike, Mr. Phelan never forgot the charities which brought ease from pain to the less fortunate.

His passing is sincerely regretted by many who will add to the condolences sent his family a word of praise for his philanthropies.

And this we hope will alleviate to some extent the sorrow of their bereavement.

Careful With Money

There was a valuable lesson to be seen in the care with which $100,000 was conveyed from old to new quarters of the Columbia Trust Company in East Boston. Eighteen policemen, armed with a variety of menacing weapons, escorted the cash.

The news columns carrying this account of transfer at the bank once headed by Mr. Kennedy, now America's "stocks czar," also told of sums lost by various Boston citizens. One reported his pocketbook gone with $400.

The lesson? Plainly it is NOT to carry large sums of money on your person. A checking account offers safety as well as convenience.

Solves Problem?

What happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable body? Every high school boy has met this famous old mathematical problem.

Prof. Fermi, a famous Italian physicist, says he has solved the problem. The force traverses the body, and it takes exactly one thousand million million millionths of a second.

The same time, in short, that it takes a determined wife to go through the obstinacy of an unyielding husband.

Or his pockets.

Break These Bad "Contracts"!

By Nelson Harding

Laws like those of other nations
That forbid all ransom payments
Are required in our country
To break up the kidnap racket.

If no ransom, then no motive
And no profit for the snatchers.
Harsh, at first, may seem such measures,
But would make our future safer.

Listen, World! -:- -:- By Elsie Robinson

ARE YOU LIMPING THROUGH LIFE?

Do you remember that hideous, monotonous chord of mangled music which follows the drag of Philip Carey's crippled foot in the movie "Of Human Bondage?" Foolish question. If you ever heard it, it would not be possible for you to forget it. For those who didn't, the story is quickly told.

Elsie Robinson

Life ended for Philip's mother as it was beginning for her little son. She died pressing her pitying hand upon his twisted foot. He lived with the consciousness of that foot spreading like a sickness through the fabric of his spirit.

To the friends who tried to cheer him, to the doctor who tried to cure him, a club foot was a common enough affliction, to be borne with fortitude and forgotten in the press of larger problems.

Surely, with his intelligence, Philip should be able to forget a handicap which strangers ceased to notice an hour after meeting him.

But Philip could not, WOULD NOT forget. The drag of it was a vague horror at first, then a frantic hatred—then a vicious habit which completely bound him—

Thud ... thud ... thud...

Haltingly, hideously, Philip's twisted foot hobbles across the screen—just the foot, all the rest of the fine body obscured, as all the rest of his fine spirit was being obscured by that one, twisted thought. After each thud comes that mangled chord which haunts you for days, symbol of limping flesh and limping soul. Presently the trail becomes so tragic that you can hardly bear to follow it. Mildred, the waitress, has the face of a fish, and blood to match. A slimy, stupid, selfish little beast, without one decent instinct—revolting to his intelligence and refinement—yet he could not forget her.

Why did Philip, the gentleman, cling to her so? For the same dark reason that he clung to the sick consciousness of his club foot. He was in bondage to them both through his hurt pride.

Human pride must be fed somehow. If it can't achieve a sense of importance through success, it will achieve it through pain and failure.

You can see it in the embittered woman who "goes around making a martyr of herself." Sensitive, orphaned Philip, growing up in crippled loneliness, unwittingly made a martyr of himself—and Mildred was the nasty cross to which he clung.

Fate didn't wish Mildred on Philip as he thought. She was the result of his own self pity, and he could not shake her off until he shook off the sickness of his own pride.

You shudder for yourself as well as for Philip. For, though you will not face the fact, there is in you, too, something that drags, something that mangles all the music of life. Your body may be straight, but there is a twist in your spirit—some secret flaw of cowardice or conceit, hatred or fear, which holds you in bondage.

Long ago, it began with a small hurt or handicap. Then it increased, becoming an obsession—finally a habit. Now, though you're not aware of it, it's easier, more convenient to cling to that habit than to fight against it. So you go on, limping through life, cursing your "fate"—LONGING TO BE FREE.

YOU CAN BE...ANY TIME YOU'RE WILLING.

Riches Bar Romance -:- By Winifred Black

It was lavender when we put it in the greenhouse—the fragrant heliotrope. And now it is white.

Winifred Black

It is still fragrant, but the color has gone from the delicate petals.

I wonder if it was too warm in the greenhouse? Was there too much sun there and perhaps not enough free, blowing air, from out doors?

Anyhow it was once lavender color and now it is white, and I wonder what we can do about it.

It isn't a clear, fresh, vibrant white—that would be lovely, it is just sort of listless and faded as if it would like to be white, and didn't have quite strength enough to make the grade.

Every time I think of the white heliotrope, I think of my friend who is rich and beautiful and discontented and restless.

She's such a lovely thing, so sweet by nature and so sort of pale and colorless. I knew her when she was a little girl, all roses and laughter, all dancing feet and bright hair blowing in the wind.

FORTUNE HUNTERS

And now she's pale and a little cynical and not at all happy.

She would like to fall in love, but every time a man tries to tell her how lovely she is, she thinks of her stocks and bonds, and her bank book and her safe deposit box and she's afraid the man is thinking of them, too.

All the fine upstanding, honest, courageous young fellows know this by a kind of instinct and they avoid my poor beautiful friend as a healthy man would avoid contact with one stricken with some contagious malady.

Some day, I suppose, my rich and lovely friend will marry a real fortune hunter or a little smiling, silken voiced gigolo who can make her believe he doesn't know a thing about money and wouldn't care for it enough to pick it up if a bag of gold should fall right at his feet.

THINGS WE DREAD

The thing we dread, they say, is sure to come to us and I have often seen this saying turn out to be true.

The white heliotrope, that is what I shall call my lovely friend who is so wistful and so lonely and sometimes so very, very sad.

As for the white heliotrope itself, I shall take it out of the greenhouse some day and plant it in a sheltered nook of my green and growing garden.

Will it grow there, I wonder, or will the fresh gay winds that come singing in from the ocean be a little too rough for the little white heliotrope? Has her strength and courage been sapped by her long life in the artificial air of the greenhouse?

Anyhow I'm going to try it and see.

I hope the color will come back to the pale flower—don't you?

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

At a party an unmarried girl may have to sit around all evening waiting for some man to devote himself to her. After marriage she may have to sit around all evening waiting for him to STOP devoting himself to some other woman. So she doesn't get much sleep either way.

Helen Rowland

It's seldom you find a husband who makes himself such a helpful little ray of sunshine around the house all day Sunday that his wife's heart is broken because he has to go back to the office on Monday morning.

Traffic Rule For Love: Never try to head a man off who is determined to get past you. Give him the road—and save yourself a lot of heart bruises.

What can a girl do? If she tells a man how brave and handsome and clever he is, he thinks she has designs on him and is frightened to death; and if she doesn't, he thinks she lacks intelligence and is bored to death.

A man never feels so completely fooled by a woman as when she threatens to do something rash—and then actually DOES it.

A man can always tell you what the administration at Washington ought to do with its millions—even when he can't tell you what he did with the last $10 his wife let him have out of his own pay envelope.

When love dies, nothing consoles a woman so much as laying it away in a beautiful casket with flowers and last rites, but a man doesn't care whether his dead loves are buried in Potter's Field or thrown on the ash heap, so that they STAY dead.

The kind of husband who gets shot is one who has enough nerve-wracking little faults to keep a woman on the verge of murder, but no ONE sin big enough to give her conscientious grounds for divorce.

Practically all men are alike, before breakfast and after marriage. But under a harvest moon there is always ONE man who seems different from all the others.

Human Side of the News; Fire in Heavens

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Twice in very recent days have huge balls of fire appeared suddenly in the heavens above our United States to the admiration and amazement of thousands and to the peril of a few. The first was a meteor of July 23rd, of which I was fortunate enough to get glimpse as it came hurtling out of the northeast.

The second was the meteor shower of September 27, which burst above Solano County, California, around the New York-San Francisco airplane express.

The July visitor from the great beyond came out of a clear moonlit sky. At first glance in some regions it looked as if the moon had fallen from its high place and was dashing wildly through space. Then the sphere took on a fiery glow, began disintegrating, and disappeared, probably into the Atlantic.

The meteor, seemingly so low, was mistaken by many for a giant airship traveling at tremendous speed. To other watchers this thought occurred:

"What would have happened to an airplane if it had been anywhere near the meteor?"

BALLS OF FLAME

They have their answer in the story of the startling experience of the crew and 13 passengers of the airplane. The airship was moving along at an altitude of seven thousand feet when, at dawn, a meteoric shower broke about it.

Two huge balls of fire were seen and countless other bits of the flaming cosmic dust. One of the larger bodies was so close to the ship that it rocked while the pilot was swerving to get out of its path.

Meteors are called the debris of creation. Bits of stone and metal, they whirl in streams about the sun to fall into the atmosphere surrounding our equally whirling planet by the millions each day. But only one of each two million finds a resting place on our land or in our waters.

The thin layer which we call the atmosphere stands between us and this rain of stone and iron. The whirling particles are set afire by friction as they strike the atmosphere and thus are consumed. These "falling stars" have been seen through the centuries.

Yet no cases are known of a human being having been struck by one, and few are found after falling to the earth. They rush upon the earth at a speed of fifteen hundred miles a minute, but our protective ceiling brings them up short and, in addition to setting them afire, slows them down to a walk of several hundred feet a second.

CELEBRATED METEOR

The most celebrated meteor in American history is the one which fell in Fairfield County, Connecticut, at dawn on December 14, 1807. Those who saw it described its appearance exactly as the witnesses of 1934 did theirs.

But the farmers of Weston were able to collect the evidence in the great stones which buried themselves in their fields and pastures. One stone weighed 200 pounds, and Yale University has a fragment of this meteor.

It is reasonable to assume that at some time in the past great catastrophes were caused by meteors. On the other hand, it is perhaps unreasonable to assume that all have miraculously fallen away from humans and human habitations.

Who knows but that whole tribes and even ancient civilizations have been destroyed by such as the Cape York meteorite of forty tons, which Admiral Peary brought to New York from its bed in Greenland, or the mightier ones of Africa and the Arizona desert.

As Charles Fitshugh Tallman wrote recently in Nature Magazine, the fall of a meteor is a wondrous, sensational and romantic event. The piece of rock and metal, no matter how small, is something which does not belong to this earth, and is the only tangible evidence we have of what matter exists in worlds apart.

The meteors which New York saw in July, and those of California in September, may once have been part of other stars or planets. Only a few hours before they came to earth they were hundreds of thousands of miles away. What is more, they are not dead, inanimate things.

Dr. Charles B. Lipman, internationally known bacteriologist, has discovered that they contain living micro-organisms, which science takes to mean that life in some form may exist in some parts of cosmos besides the earth. The Man on Mars has been a fanciful, conjectural creature, yet here is a tiny and first bit of evidence that he is a possibility.

Letter to Cordell Hull

NANKING, Oct. 14.—Striking back at the United States silver buying policy, the government today slapped a 10 per cent tax on all silver exported from China.—News Item.

Hon. Cordell Hull, Sir:
Sec. of 48 States.

ENCLOSED please to find open letter to American people on postcard. You have bought Chinese silver to help Oriental people so please send crutch by return mail to help same people across street.

Your honorable new deal of future ancestors is for Blue Eagle to get all gold. You can have bird if you send us bird's nest for celestial menu.

Now you get all silver for another bird which must be ostrich. Without silver Chinese merchants enjoy no export business at all times except weekdays. This is fragile statement so please do not bend or fold.

Distinguished and revered American Government's purchase of silver in Eastern market is delightful and artificial stimulation which is not practical. If you put dead bee in pulmotor you do not get much desired and delicious honey.

We eat shark's fins but we do not shake hands with them. Therefore, American States work racket on Chinese shopkeeper. Not to be outdone in Oriental courtesy Chinese will plaster 10 per cent export duty on all silver to give closest co-operation to bilking American shopkeeper.

While this cements cracked friendship we are morose to say rare porcelain will never look the same. Look through your honorable files for London agreement on silver stability and please send copy to yourself.

At present writing Chinese export is ruined by no silver. Wishing this is entirely mutual and hoping to remain from you, sincerely,

Chung "Bugs" Baer of the Mugg Dynasty.

Hulks and Potatoes

Tbose lines that the Walrus spoke about "ships and sealing wax" and "cabbages and kings." People who know their "Alice in Wonderland" have always regarded them as delightful fantasies for the nursery, but far too illogical for the workaday world.

And now comes Governor Brann of Maine to prove once more that truth is stranger than fiction. He links "sailing ships" with "potatoes." And he is in dead earnest—just as logical as can be.

He suggests that the numerous square riggers abandoned on Maine's mud flats—who said anything about "the stern and rock-ribbed coast?"—be cleaned up and used as storage houses for Aroostook county's surplus potatoes.

Since the federal government has agreed to buy some of the potatoes, the Governor even suggests that the spuds might be towed south in the hulks before winter sets in.

It's not a bad idea. It would keep those potatoes from going to waste, thus benefiting the "Down East" farmers. And it would get those derelicts out of the way in most useful fashion.

However, if the plan is adopted, we sincerely hope that Governor Brann will not be remembered by posterity as Maine's' Walrus.
